THE GOLF ACCIDENT.

CARLISLE ISSUE COSTS DECISION.

LIABILITY OF PLAINTIFF.

BUT CAN RECOVER FROM THE CLUB

Lord Chief Justice, in the Ulster urt on Friday decided in nville Golf Club case that plaintiff, Albert Potter, of gh Park, Belfast, was to pay ndant Carlisle his costs, he entitled to recover them from Club.

conclusion of the case on counsel for the plaintiff sub- t Mr. Potter should not be n to pay the costs of Mr. in whose favour the jury had nts were resumed this after-

S. Murphy, K.C., M.P., sub- t prima facie Mr. Carlisle was ediate cause of the plaintiff eye and that it was a per- asonable thing to join Mr. in the action. If they were ly entitled to join the Club and ubmitted it was also reasonable persons who were found to be blame should bear the costs tion as between themselves and tiff, and also the costs that the an innocent party, had incurred eding against another innocent Mr. Carlisle. The negligence of ub had caused Mr. Carlisle to strike Mr. Potter in the therefore the entire respon- the accident rested with the

W. Beattie, K.C., for the Club, that there was no necessity to parties and that the plaintiff not get costs from the Club in ue against Mr. Carlisle.

THE JUDGE AND THE MATTER.

His Lordship said he had had a further tunity of considering the matter. der that was sought was ad- tedly purely discretionary, and the he had to satisfy himself on was principle upon which the Courts d in making that exceptional order. there was jurisdiction to make it was no question. It had been lished in many cases in England. had also been considered in their n Courts.

So far as the plaintiff was concerned, ld he have proceeded with any gree of safety against one defendant? Wouldn't it really have been looking for aster if he had come there with only defendant? The jury had come to conclusion that Mr. Carlisle was nerated from blame. It was obviously onable, and not only so, but was per and necessary in the interests of tice, that Mr. Carlisle should have n cited as a defendant.

In the circumstances, therefore, he that the case came within the ded cases and whilst the plaintiff would pay the defendant Carlisle his ts, he should be entitled to recover from the golf club.

A stay of execution for six weeks was granted.

TERRITORIAL ARMY SPORTS FUND.

WAR MINISTER AND SCHEME

PROVIDING TRAINERS AND TEAMS.

An anonymous donor who recently started with £50,000 a fund to be placed at the disposal of the Territorial Army for outdoor sport, was mentioned by Mr. Hore-Belisha, Minister for War, yesterday.

Speaking at the opening of a new drill hall at Merthyr Tydvil, Glamorgan, he said that other sums had been forthcoming, and it was intended that the capital should not be encroached upon, so that there might be a permanent income assured for all time. It was proposed to provide throughout the country pools of expert trainers in all forms of sport, who would attend drill halls to train teams and give tuition to novices. This would give a chance to those who at present could not participate in games because they were not good enough.

"Next it is intended to provide travelling expenses," said Mr. Hore-Belisha, "for unit teams and players who wish to enter for competitions, to enable them to reach the centres where the competitions are held, and similarly to help representative teams of the Territorial Army when competing against the other services.

"In the larger Territorial Army centres it is hoped to hire or purchase sports grounds. The aim of the Director-General of the Territorial Army is to assist scattered units and those in distressed areas.

"It is evident that we have in the Territorial Army, a compact, solid and determined force of men, who make all the better soldiers because, having daily experience of other avocations, they can add this experience to their military craft," added Mr. Hore-Belisha. "The soldier's life is a hard life in war, but some of you have led a hard life in peace. No suffering and no privation has diminished your love for the land of your fathers, nor will any suffering or privation that you may be called upon to undergo diminish your resolution to keep your traditions and your country inviolable."

POLICE WIN APPEAL.

FINE ON TYRONE MOTORIST.

At Omagh Quarter Sessions yesterday, before Judge Hanna, an appeal was brought by the police against the de- ion of the R.M. at Omagh Petty Sessions in dismissing a case brought against John H. Coulter, Main Street, Castlederg, for being drunk in charge of a motor-car.

Captain Fyffe, Crown Solicitor, appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. George Murnaghan for the respondent.

Constable Moore gave evidence that at 11-40 p.m. on June 29 he saw a car being driven along High Street, Omagh, in a zig-zag fashion and when it was being turned he observed that defendant driving it. Witness afterwards the car parked at the monument. Coulter was then sitting at the driving wheel. Witness asked defendant to get out and when he did so he staggered and caught hold of the door to steady himself.

Several other policemen were ex- ed and gave evidence that Coulter under the influence of drink.

Dr. O'Brien said Coulter went through test very well, but his memory was clear. He walked quite steadily turned. He picked up small articles, ding a shilling, from the floor.

The defence was that the defendant not under the influence of drink.

County Court Judge reversed the of the lower court, fined the dant £5 with £2 witnesses ex- s and imposed a recorded sentence ree months' imprisonment, not to rved if the defendant kept the for a year and entered into al bail of £10.

BALLYMENA SPECIAL COURT.

special court at Ballymena, Mr. B. O'Neill, J.P., Rachel May M'Cready, Kilbegs, Antrim, remanded on bail to Ballymena Sessions charged with attempting fraud and obtaining from the ter-General the sum of £2 13s means of a forged Post Office gs Bank withdrawal and receipt table Beattie gave evidence of and stated that, when cautioned, admitted the offence.

5,000 'PLANES IN TWO YEARS.

AMBITIOUS FRENCH AIM.

ACCORDING TO AIR MINISTER.

PARIS, Friday.—The creation within two years of a French Air Force of 5,000 'planes is now the aim of the French High Command, according to M. Guy la Chambre, Minister of Air, in a statement published to-day in the "Petit Parisien."—Reuter.

CLAIM BY BELFAST CONSTABLE

BROUGHT IN KING'S BENCH.

DAMAGE TO A CYCLE.

"I have very strong views in regard to the bringing of cases for small amounts in the High Court," said the Lord Chief Justice in the Ulster King's Bench Division.

Before his Lordship was a motion on behalf of the defendants, Messrs. Wordie & Co. (Ulster), Ltd., to remit an action brought against them by Andrew James Glass, police constable, of Mount Prospect Park, for damages to his bicycle caused by alleged negligence in the control of a horse and van.

Mr. J. D. Chambers, K.C., with whom was Mr. E. W. Jones (instructed by Mr. J. Morris M'Kee), for the defendants, said it was one of the most audacious actions brought in the High Court. It was on affidavit, and not denied, that the bicycle before the accident was worth 30s, and could be repaired for £3 18s. He would ask his Lordship to hold that it was an abuse of the process of the Court to bring an action of that kind in the High Court.

Mr. I. Copeland (instructed by Messrs. N. & F. Tughan), for the plaintiff, said he was relying on the question of visible means. The plaintiff had the means and was in his (counsel's) submission entitled to bring the action in the High Court.

Legal arguments followed, after which the motion was adjourned for a week.

Tallow slow of sale Palm kernels quietly steady. Rubber—Hard fine Para steady; 8d spot and forward. Linseed oil quietly steady. Resin steady and quiet. Petroleum steady. Turpentine steady. Ground nuts quietly steady.

Second Report.—Cane sugar dull. Cocoa—West African spot steady and slow, forward shipments idle. Coffee quietly steady on spot. Rice steady and quiet. Linseed quiet. Palm oil firm; good inquiry for spot and near at hand positions; sellers soft oils October-November and January-February £13 5s to £13 7s 6d transit, 2s 6d less ex-quay terms; Lagos forward nominal, mediums £13 7s 6d to £13 10s, transit according to shipments. Tallow dull and inactive. South American beefs nominal, 22s 6d c.i.f. Palm kernels steady; demand quiet. Rubber Hard fine Para steady, 8d spot and forward; plantation quiet; buyers spot 8 9-16d, values November-December 8⅛d. Linseed oil quietly steady. Resin rather firmer, American G.F. 16s 9d, W.W. 20s spot. Petroleum steady. Turpentine quietly steady. Ground nuts steady and quiet. Lard quiet, boxes 47s 6d to 49s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISIONS.—Fowls 7d to 7½d, chickens 9½d to 10½d.

BIRKENHEAD CATTLE—The week's offerings were 1,824 cattle and 2,583 lambs. For the smaller supply of cattle on offer this week there was no improvement in the demand, and late rates were difficult to maintain. Choice small bullocks and heifers made 6¾d to exceptionally 7d, best medium weights 6½d, strong and secondary classes 6d to 6¼d, bulls 4d to 5½d, young cows 5d, other classes around 4d. Lambs were in poor request at around 8d for the best qualities—all prices per lb. sinking offal.

CLEVELAND IRON—Market steady with inquiry gradually increasing. Stocks of Cleveland pig light, and the small intermittent make insufficient for current needs. Early additional production essential, and conditions may justify resumption of continuous output sooner than seemed likely. Restricted make of East Coast hematite not quite adequate for present requirements. Stocks embarrassingly large, but slowly decreasing. Semi-finished iron and steel manufacturers better employed than for some time. Finished iron and steel producers turning out increasing tonnage of all commodities, but in need of orders for delivery a little ahead. Scrap market more active than recently. Light and heavy cast iron and machinery metal in good demand and at full market quotations.

DUBLIN CORN.—The market is quietly steady with supplies ample for requirements at—Wheat 27s 6d to 30s 6d per barrel according to bushel weight; barley, feeding 16s to 17s, malting 18s to 19s; white oats 12s 6d to 14s 3d and black 11s 3d to 12s 6d.

GLASGOW CORN—The market rules steady enough, and there are few changes to report. Wheat is quiet, and No. 1 Manitoba wheat for October-November shipment is quoted at 27s per 480lbs. c.i.f. Glasgow. Plate maize is about unchanged, spot value being 6s 10½d per cwt. and later positions 6s 4½d down to 5s 10½d per cwt. according to position. Grinding barley is nominal at 6s 3d per cwt. on spot, while for shipment is 5s 9d per cwt. Home mill offals remain in fair demand, and are unchanged at recent levels. First grade Australian flour on spot is nominal at 22s 6d per 280lbs. ex store plus quota.

GLASGOW IRON AND STEEL.—Scrap metals—The general position is about unchanged, although the tone of the market is somewhat better, and deliveries are being taken more freely. No change in scrap values is expected until the New Year. The foundry position appears to be improving, but supplies of this grade are not so plentiful. Demand for steel and cast iron scrap tends better.

LIVERPOOL BUTTER—Little activity was displayed for Colonial descriptions, which are available on recent terms with possible discounts in places. New Zealand finest 115s to 118s, first grade now quoted 112s to 115s, Australians 112s to 115s, and Canadians 108s to 111s. Continentals are firmly held, influenced by the rise in f.o.b. quotations. Danish advanced 2s at 128s to 131s, Swedish remaining at 118s to 121s, and Dutch at 109s to 112s—per cwt.

COMRADES LAUGHED AND JEERED,

SAID IRISH FUSILIER.

SENTENCE WITH REMISSION.

Fifty days were remitted at Bordon (Hants) yesterday by Brigadier H. O. Curtis, officer commanding the troops at Bordon and Longmoor, from a sentence of 84 days' detention passed by a district courtmartial on Fusilier Lawrence George Wallace (21), of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, who was charged with desertion.

At the trial Wallace said that his comrades laughed and jeered at him because of a physical disability and when he went home on summer leave he had become so sensitive to the ragging that he could not pluck up enough courage to return.

EIRE LABOURER

BEFORE DONEMANA COURT.

WHAT R.M. CANNOT UNDERSTAND.

A penalty of 21s and costs was imposed by Captain P. S. Bell, R.M., at Donemana Petty Sessions yesterday on a young Eire farm labourer, John Morgan, employed at a farm at Glencush, Donemana, who was charged with riotous and disorderly behaviour on Sept. 27.

Sergeant Lynn gave evidence that on this occasion there were two dances in Donemana, one in the Parochial Hall and the other in the Orange Hall. At 10-45 p.m. defendant came down the street and shouted, "Up, De Valera," and the police had to arrest him and put him in the barracks for his own safety.

Defendant denied shouting "Up, De Valera," and stated that he was having a conversation with another man, and asked this man, "Did you see any word about De Valera lately in the papers?" The other man said, "What odds is it about De Valera?" and "I said," stated defendant, "that he was the best man that ever came into Donegal."

Captain Bell—Are you a Donegal man?

Witness—Yes.

Captain Bell—Supposing someone from this part of the world went into Raphoe and started to shout "Up, Craigavon," what do you think would happen to him?

Defendant—I did not shout anything.

Captain Bell—You are perfectly entitled to your own political opinions, and no one has any right to interfere with you, but you are not entitled to express them in a way that would cause a breach of the peace.

Defendant—It was not through any harm I said it.

The Resident Magistrate observed that he understood in the Dungiven area some 300 farm labourers were signing on the Labour Exchange for work. "That being so," he added, "I cannot understand why people from Donegal come over here to compete with local workers. However, it is a free country, but it is not free to shout 'Up, De Valera,' in this part of the world."

CASE OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

FIRST OF KIND IN ULSTER.

PROSECUTION AT DONEMANA.

A prosecution of considerable interest to farmers came on for hearing at Donemana Petty Sessions. Captain W. H. Fyffe, M.B.E., Crown Solicitor for Co. Tyrone who prosecuted, stating that so far as he was aware it was the first case of the kind in Northern Ireland.

The case was one in which Jas. Barton Woods, farmer, of Ballinboy, was prosecuted for refusing to give information with regard to his cattle to Sergeant Gregg, and was brought under the Livestock Industry Act, 1937, the Eire Confirmation of Agreement Act 1938, and the Cattle Imports from Eire Order 1938.

Sergeant Gregg stated that having failed to find defendant at home he met him on the road and told him he wanted a full description of his cattle, especially those eligible for subsidy purposes. Defendant said he would tell him nothing about the cattle. Woods asked what authority the police had for seeking this information, and was told that the police were authorised by Act of Parliament. Woods then asked if witness had the Act of Parliament with him, and when told it was in the barracks said he would like to see it. Woods had a considerable number of cattle and was one of the biggest farmers in the district. On previous occasions he had from 60 to 80 cattle and had a large dairy business.

Replying to Mr. C. R. Clark, for defendant, witness stated that he had taken stock under the old regulations and Mr. Woods had not given as much assistance as other people in the district.

Captain Fyffe said certain regular routes were laid down for cattle coming across the Border and they had to be imported by those routes.

"We know from police reports," he said, "from all over Northern Ireland, that at least 50 per cent. of the fat cattle are not coming in by these routes at all. I am not suggesting that," said Captain Fyffe, "against Mr. Woods."

Woods said on this date, September 26, he was carting in corn, and when the sergeant asked the particulars about the cattle he told him it would be impossible to give them on that day, and asked why he wanted to know.

Captain P. S. Bell, R.M.—Possibly you never heard of the subsidy?

Defendant—Yes, I had.

He told the sergeant there were other days that he could come, and the sergeant said he could compel him to give the information. "I said," stated the defendant, "that he would not compel me that day and that he had plenty of other days to come."

Witness explained that he had 94 acres of corn to get in, and on the day the sergeant called was a splendid day for harvesting purposes.

Mr. Clark emphasised that this was a splendid harvest day and that there had been few good days this year. Defendant, he said, had a farm of 350 acres, and that it was essential he should get his crop in while the weather was fine.

In reply to the R.M., defendant gave an undertaking that in future he would facilitate the Constabulary in the execution of their duty.

Captain Bell said he supposed all that the prosecution desired was that farmers should have it brought to their notice that they must disclose information about any cattle in their possession.

A penalty of £2, with £3 3s costs was imposed.

FOR AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

JOINT DEFENCE PROPOSED.

NATIONAL SERVICE COMING?

WELLINGTON, Friday.—Sir Charles Marr, a former Australian Minister of Defence, has suggested the formation of a Defence Committee representing the Governments of Australia and New Zealand enabling complete co-operation.

He also suggested that the respective Defence Ministers should exchange more frequent visits, saying that the interests of the two countries were identical and that either would help the other in the event of a war which might be at their front doors.

Sir Charles added that he would not be surprised to see the introduction of universal territorial training within six months.

"There is any amount of room for a better understanding between the two countries," said Mr. Savage, Prime Minister of New Zealand, commenting on the suggestion.

"Each country should know what the other is doing and an exchange of opinion is very advisable particularly in defence matters."—Reuter.

£4,000,000 FOR DEFENCE WORK.

SYDNEY, Friday.—In order to carry out urgent defence works the Loan Council at Canberra, the Federal capital, is floating a special £4,000,000 Loan. This is being floated concurrently with a £6,700,000 Conversion Loan.—Central News.

ULSTER CROP REPORT.

WHEAT, OATS, BARLEY, FLAX.

The report of the Ministry of Agriculture for October, 1938, states all winter wheat was secured in good condition, but a fair proportion of spring wheat is still in stooks. In the late districts it was difficult to get crops cut and fields cleared during the wet weather at the end of September. Where the crop was harvested well up to time, and under good conditions, the yields will be fully up to average dimensions, and the quality of the grain good. In the case of late crops, however, the quality of the grain may have suffered from the weather at harvesting time, and may be rather lower in yield than anticipated earlier.

The oat crop was late in ripening, and there appears to have been a considerable amount of unevenness at the ripening stage; some oats were still in a green state towards the end of September. In early districts oats were saved under good conditions in the earlier part of September, but elsewhere progress varied considerably with the effects of the weather.

Barley is stated to have a yield this year of a ton per acre, and straw is reported to be heavier in bulk.

As to flax, the season is late and scutching has not commenced to any appreciably extent. Yield of fibre may be below normal.

Shipping demand for potatoes remained quiet throughout September, and only small quantities were disposed of by growers at disappointing prices.

The result of hay seed threshing had been disappointing with yields lighter than for 1937, and the quality of the seed "barely moderate."

GERMAN PRESS SATISFACTION.

BERLIN, Friday.—Sir Samuel Hoare's speech at Clacton yesterday has been received in Germany with considerable satisfaction. In official circles the opinion is expressed that Sir Samuel is a man who knows his own mind and is determined to adopt a realistic attitude towards European problems and to that of Anglo-German relations in particular, wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

The "Berliner Tageblatt" writes that Sir Samuel Hoare has illuminated the foggy atmosphere of scepticism, mistrust, and enmity, which was created by certain European circles, especially after the Fuhrer's Saarbrucken speech . . . . with his own stout-hearted feeling for reality.

The paper recalls that Sir Samuel has filled the position of Foreign Minister, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Home Secretary, the last during the recent A.R.P. crisis, and declares that he is therefore particularly well qualified to deal with the problem of British armaments.

BRITAIN AND ARMAMENTS.

No one possessed the right, continues the paper, to doubt that the Munich Agreement signed by Mr. Chamberlain and Herr Hitler was as worthy of trust as the Anglo-Naval Agreement. It was only natural that each State should see that it possessed sufficient armaments, and, if England had come to the conclusion, as the result of the recent crisis, that its defence measures were inadequate, it undoubtedly had the right to strengthen them.

Only ill-will could suggest that these measures on the part of Britain were due to the "German peril," and Sir Samuel's speech had been a warning to mischief-makers, and, as such, an important contribution to European development.

While the remainder of the German Press so far refrains from editorial comment on the speech, it is clear from the headlines employed over the verbatim reports that a feeling of satisfaction is general.

Typical examples are:—

"Hoare—'Hitler keeps his word.'"—"Angriff."

"Hoare against the war propagandists."—"Nachtausgabe."

"Without Anglo-German friendship no lasting peace."—"Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung."

ROYAL IRISH FUSILIERS.

ARMAGH OLD COMRADES MEET.

Comrade Creighton presiding, a meeting of the Royal Irish Fusiliers Old Comrades' Association was held in Armagh on Friday evening.

The Chairman said he had been informed it was unlikely that the Fusiliers would be at the Depot, Armagh, before 1941.

Subject to his acceptance, Captain C. H. Ensor, O.B.E., D.L., was appointed president and Captain H. Haughey, M.C., chairman.

PORTRUSH FIREWORKS ECHO

MOTORISTS FINED AT DONEMANA.

At Donemana Petty Sessions on Friday Thomas Casey, Market Street, Strabane, was prosecuted for carrying eight passengers in a taxi licensed to carry four; for being in such a position in the taxi that he had not proper control, and failing to have an effective horn. John Casey, the owner, was prosecuted for permitting the excess passengers to be carried.

Mr. C. Magee, for the defendants, said the taxi was registered in the name of John Casey, because his brother Thomas was under the age of 21, and, apart from that, John Casey had nothing to do with the case. On September 8, the occasion of the last fireworks display at Portrush, Thomas Casey had arranged to take two loads of passengers to Derry to get the train to Portrush. He had arranged to make two journeys, but one set of passengers was late in arriving, and he took the two lots at once. When pulled up by the police he left the four excess passengers behind, and took the other four passengers to Derry, picking up the other four on the return journey, and taking them back to Strabane.

Sergeant Lynn said there were three adult passengers in the front seat of the car, and it would have been impossible for Casey to have proper control.

Thomas Casey said he had no difficulty in controlling the car.

Thomas Casey was fined 10s for carrying the excess passengers, 10s in respect of the horn, and 20s in the other case. John Casey was fined 30s.

ORMONDE PLATE.

NADINE A SURPRISE WINNER.

FAIRCHANCE IN LUCK.

SCORES A POPULAR VICTORY.

Unexpected results are usually associated with racing over the Newbury course, especially at this time of the year, and once again the bookmakers were not disappointed, writes "Hotspur," the "Daily Telegraph" Racing correspondent. However, considering that there were 110 runners for the six events on the card, backers did not fare too badly, one favourite and one joint-favourite being successful.

On his running behind Heliopolis at Kempton Park on the first day of the month Fairchance was undoubtedly well handicapped in the October Nursery and was made favourite at the rather generous odds, in the circumstances, of 5 to 2. There was also plenty of support for Harvest Sun and Statute. Ridden by Peter Maher, Fairchance was always going easily and, although Statute stuck to him well for a long way, the son of Fairway was not all out to beat Sir Abe Bailey's filly by three-parts of a length. Doublet, who was reported to have been well galloped, finished fast to get third place, half a length behind Statute.

The field ran in two groups, and it is significant that the first three were among those racing on the stands side. Appeasement, one of the five runners on the far rails, ran very well, and was only just beaten out of a place, but Moonland found his 7lb. penalty a bit too much for him.

The early form of Nadine entitled her to be well-fancied for the Ormonde Plate, but she had disappointed a couple of times since running fifth to Rockfel in the One Thousand Guineas. Before that the daughter of Manna had won over this course in good style, but her starting price of 10 to 1 did not suggest that she was expected to do very much.

DUNKELD'S FAILURE.

An absurdly short price was accepted about Dunkeld who, after all, is a maiden, and had never shown any form to justify his being made a 6 to 4 chance. He ran badly, and began to hang as soon as E. Smith attempted to make him exert himself, his chance being negligible a furlong from home.

Most prominent in the early stages were The Tweed, Nadine, and Lady Noel, but Nadine drew out at the distance and scored with great ease by three lengths from Port Royal, who beat Temeraire by a length for second place. Merry Call was backed, but was always nearer last than first.

Another favourite failed dismally when Too Dear was beaten a long way from home in the Russley Handicap. No fewer than 31 turned out for this mile and a quarter affair, and they provided a typical Newbury result, Nitakrit II. at 100 to 7 winning from Crumb, a 20 to 1 chance

Crumb was always prominent behind Vieux Temps and took up the running soon after entering the straight, followed by Cholo and Tickling.

Below the distance Drumstick, Grace Note and Nitakrit II. joined in, but just as an interesting finish seemed probable Nitakrit II. shot into the lead and went on to win easily by a couple of lengths from Crumb, with Grace Note third and Cholo fourth.

Nitakrit II. is trained by the ex-jockey, Cecil Ray, and was capably ridden by Victor Smyth's apprentice K. Mullins. This youngster will make a name for himself before long.

DOMENICO'S EASY SUCCESS.

For a long way in the Manton Handicap it looked as if last year's winner, Jacob, would repeat that success. He went ahead from African Lily soon after the start and increased his lead all down the far side of the course. Entering the straight, however, he was not more than a couple of lengths in front of Sir Peter, and was beaten shortly afterwards.

Sir Peter then came on from Domenico, but gave way to the French-bred colt at the distance, Domenico drawing away to win rather easily by a couple of lengths.

Domenico reversed the Nottingham form with Irish Stew and Sir Peter with surprising ease.

Despite being badly drawn, Lover's Fate proved too good for Landed in the Two-Year-Old Selling Plate, passing the post with a length and a half to spare from Walter Nightingall's youngster. Lover's Fate was bought in reasonably cheap for 180 guineas.

Maryport had run well at the last Newbury meeting, but faded away in the last furlong. Less use was made of her in the Letcombe Selling Nursery, and she came through to challenge Wyllie at the distance. For a moment it seemed that the extra strength of Jones in the saddle would enable Wyllie to hold on, but little Dawson rode well on Maryport, and got up close home to win by a neck.

COLOUR FILM INVENTION.

GERMAN PROCESS EXPLAINED.

BERLIN, Friday.—The discovery of a new printing process for colour films was announced in a lecture before the "German Society of Photographic Research" by Professor J. Eggert.

The discovery was made in the Laboratory of the Agfa works at Wolfen, which is part of the German Dye Trust.

Copies made by this process can immediately be shown on the screen by the ordinary film machinery.

"IRON LUNG" SENT BY AIR.

BUT PARALYSIS PATIENT DIES.

An "iron lung," rushed by air from Ipswich to Newark Hospital yesterday, failed to save Harry Pratt, 27-year-old electrician, who died from infantile paralysis.

The "lung" (of the Pragg-Paul pulsator type) was in Newark an hour and three-quarters after leaving Ipswich airport. It was lent by Ipswich Hospital, from which it was sent to Cranwell, the journey being completed by lorry.

NEWCASTLE COURT DAY.

FINES FOR MOTORING OFFENCES.

At Newcastle Petty Sessions on Friday, before Mr. S. C. Clarke, R.M., Peter Kane, unemployed quarryworker, was fined 5s with 2s costs for driving a car belonging to Patrick O'Prey, Ballymagreehan, on August 17, without having a licence; 10s with 3s costs, and disqualification for not being insured.

Philip Kane, a passenger, of Clonachullion, for aiding and abetting, was fined 10s with 3s costs and 12 months' licence disqualification.

John M. Morrison, Ballydrain, Dunmurry, was fined 10s with 12s costs for disregarding a halt sign at the Shimna Road crossing on August 21.

BRIDGWATER BY-ELECTION.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE.

Mr. Patrick Gerald Heathcoat Amory, of Chevithorne, Tiverton (Devon), was yesterday adopted as Conservative candidate in the Bridgwater by-election caused by the appointment of Mr. R. P. Croom-Johnson to the High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division.

Figures for the last election at Bridgwater were Mr. R. P. Croom-Johnson (Cons.), 17,939; Mr. N. D. Blake (Lab.), 7,370.

Mr. R. P. Croom-Johnson had represented the Bridgwater Division of Somerset since 1929.

Mr. Heathcoat Amory, who is 26, is the son of the late Major Ludovic Heathcoat Amory and a grandson of the first baronet, who sat as M.P. for Tiverton from 1868/85.

BELFAST DIVORCE ACTION.

DECREE GIVEN TO HUSBAND.

Yesterday in the King's Bench Division of the Ulster High Court the Lord Chief Justice granted a decree of divorce a mensa et thoro in a petition by Thomas Johnston, a machinist, of Glenvale Street, Belfast, on the grounds of the misconduct of his wife, Margaretta Johnston, with Michael Joseph Close, a journeyman blacksmith, whose address was given as Springfield Road.

Mr. C. A. Nicholson (instructed by Mr. D. P. Marrinan) was for the petitioner, and there was no appearance on behalf of the respondent.

Counsel said the parties were married in April, 1924, and there were six children of the marriage, four of whom were still alive. The respondent had gone to England, and it was impossible to find her. Service was made on her mother, Mrs. J. Edgar, of Broom Street.

After evidence, his Lordship said he was satisfied the petition had duly reached the respondent.

DONEGAL VILLAGE DISTURBANCES.

17 MEN CHARGED.

COURT SCENES EXCITING.

Disturbances in the village of Carrigans following the return of processionists from the Relief of Derry celebrations on August 13 last, when Orangemen and Roman Catholics were involved in a series of incidents to quell which the Civic Guards had to draw their batons and send for reinforcements, led to the appearance of 17 men at Newtowncunningham District Court on Friday, charged with being guilty of conduct calculated to lead to a breach of the peace.

Nine of the cases were adjourned until the February Court, and eight were dismissed.

THE DEFENDANTS.

The defendants, all of whom reside in the Carrigans district, were—John Heron, Thomas Heron, Patrick Toland, Bernard Magee, William Magee, Thomas Magee, sen., Thomas Magee, jun., John Magee, John Magee, jun., Daniel Wilson, William Doran, James Doran, junior, Daniel Taylor, Thomas M'Cready, William Hetherington, and Moses Wray.

The last two-named were also charged with being drunk and disorderly, for which each was fined 5s.

Mr. H. C. O'Doherty appeared for Thomas Magee, and Mr. J. G. O'Kane represented all the other defendants, with the exception of M'Cready, Wray, and Hetherington, who were not professionally represented.

When Superintendent Kelly was outlining the case he said the summonses arose out of celebrations in Derry.

The Justice—What were they celebrating?

The Supt.—I think it was the Black Watch or the Black Chapter. (Laughter).

The Justice—Oh, no. Can any of you Carrigans men tell me what they were celebrating?

One of the defendants—The opening of the gates. (Laughter).

The supt. said relations in the district for several years past had been rather strained.

The Justice—Are all these people of the same way of thinking?

The supt.—No, there are both factions.

AT THE VILLAGE PUMP.

Sergeant Long said on August 12 James Doran made a complaint at the barracks that inscriptions were painted on the village pump. Witness saw the inscriptions—"No Surrender," and "No P——."

The Justice—There is no harm in saying "No Surrender?"

A defendant—Not a bit.

The witness detailed the movements of several of the defendants, and said the crowd was so menacing that he ordered batons to be drawn and managed to get the Protestants to one side and the Catholics to the other. All the parties against whom there were summonses were in the crowd.

The Magee family, Bernard, John and William, were giving witness instructions as to how to handle the situation and as to whom he should arrest. When witness got as far as Carrigans School he saw the crowd go towards Wilson. He did not want murder in the village, and Wilson was allowed to go. Wm. and John Magee, jun., were very threatening towards him. They became so threatening witness had to send for reinforcements, which later arrived from Letterkenny.

THE SCENE IN COURT.

There was a remarkable scene in the Court during the hearing of Sergeant Long's evidence. At one stage all the defendants and several spectators were gathered round the solicitors' table, and when Superintendent Kelly ordered them to stand back a defence witness shouted: "I want to hear. He thinks no one has a right to be in Court but him."

The Justice, on one or two occasions, had to rebuke defendants for interrupting the evidence and said if there were any repetition of this conduct he would have to eject them.

Mr. H. C. O'Doherty, cross-examining Sergeant Long, asked which party was in overwhelming majority in the district.

Witness—The Protestants are predominant.

And would you think, as the officer in charge of the police of such a district, that the minority should receive special care?—They do.

Mr. O'Doherty — These instructions were the cause of all the trouble that followed?—Yes, also the drumming that took place that night.

I take it that the drumming was done by the gentlemen who were in Derry celebrating the occasion?—Yes.

Would you agree that the statement "No Surrender" would give offence to certain people in the district?—Yes.

In reply to Mr. O'Kane, witness said on normal occasions all the parties were very law-abiding.

When Mr. O'Kane was putting further questions to the witness Thomas Magee interrupted, and the Justice said he would have him put out of court.

Magee—It was not the first time I was put out.

The Justice—Keep quiet.

Guard Malone gave evidence that in M'Cready's possession he found a Union Jack, of which he took possession, as he thought the flag would be put up in the village and would lead to more serious trouble.

The Justice—There is no harm in carrying a flag. In certain circumstances it might be provocative.

Superintendent Kelly said this trouble did not start on August 12; it started in 1935, during the time of the King's Jubilee, when there were celebrations on Binion Hill It was alleged that shots were fired on that occasion. Since that time this trouble had been simmering in Carrigans.

District Justice Walsh said there were certain parts of the 32 Counties where riots based on sectarian differences arose, but he was glad to say that Donegal was practically free from that sort of thing. The people there were too highly civilised for that. It was absolutely unknown in Co. Donegal, but the Guards were determined to put an end to anything like that that cropped up.

The cases against the Herons, Toland, the Dorans, Wilson and M'Cready were dismissed, and the remainder adjourned.

S. TYRONE WOMEN UNIONISTS.

At the annual meeting of the Aughnacloy branch of the South Tyrone Women's Unionist Association at Aughnacloy on Friday night, Miss Carey Moutray, who presided, was elected chairman, Mrs. Rea vice-chairman and secretary, and Mrs. M'Clements treasurer. Mrs. Knox Browne, Aughentaine Castle, president of the association, addressed the members.

BRITAIN'S AIRCRAFT DEFENCES

HER MAGINOT LINE.

LESSONS FROM THE CRISIS.

MR. HORE-BELISHA AND CRITICS.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, the Secretary for War, replied to some of his critics when in a speech at Cardiff last night he explained why reorganisation of our anti-aircraft defences had not taken place before.

He also threw new light on the production of the 3.7in. gun, about which so much controversy has raged lately, and explained when it would be necessary to re-create a Ministry of Munitions.

From the recent crisis, he said, lessons were to be learned and the problems must be stated with candour if they were to be solved with courage.

"Speaking, it is true," he continued, with less than eighteen months' experience of my office, let me state some of the problems.

"The ground defences against aircraft attack are the Maginot line of this country and they are manned by Territorials.

"The crisis has shown that upon the whole these men who come suddenly from civil avocations can all be in their war positions within 24 hours—a large number even in twelve hours. This was a great achievement, for which, under existing powers, no rehearsal could be made.

"If practices bringing the organisation as a whole into operation were to be held at unexpected moments, as could be done with a regular army, industry would be subject to sporadic dislocations, and officers and men would be called on to bear incalculable instead of calculable inconveniences.

"They already undertake to devote time to drills and camp. Duty in isolated detachments at war stations could not, of course, be a substitute for intensive training. It would have to be an addition to this."

"The calling up of the Anti-Aircraft and Coast Defence units during the emergency," he continued, "was entirely improvised and a completely new experience in our military history.

REGULAR ARMY'S LIABILITIES.

"If the guns and searchlights were always to be maintained with detachments ready for action the time factor would be removed, but to provide the large numbers of men permanently required would involve measures to secure a great addition to the standing forces. The existing Regular Army already had its full quota of liabilities.

"We must keep the evolution of our Anti-Aircraft Defences in perspective," he went on. "There were under 10,000 men in Anti-Aircraft units in October two years ago. There are nearly five times as many in this present October.

"Improvements have been made in the conditions and prospects of those serving in the Territorial Army.

"They now know that they can utilise their abilities and realise their ambitions to the full and that they will be treated in all possible respects on the same standard as Regulars.

"They have responded. There are nearly 50,000 more soldiers in that Army to-day.

"A further great enlargement and reorganisation of our anti-aircraft defences has been announced—five divisions are to be formed in replacement of the existing two. Further, a scheme has been propounded for the special defence of certain vulnerable establishments by the employes themselves.

"There are those who say that these reforms ought to have been undertaken earlier. But the men were not forthcoming to undertake them earlier. I preferred to have some evidence that I could get the men before announcing organisations that might have been incapable of fulfilment.

BETTER TRAIN IN ADVANCE.

"There are others who say that I should have waited for the full equipment before increasing the total of divisions. Obviously, if we had kept the numbers of men down there would have been more equipment in relation to the numbers of men. I took the view that as equipment is in production it was better to train the men in advance of the full equipment than not to have the men when the equipment arrived.

"I was fortified in this view by the knowledge that while our requirements were—and are—still to be fulfilled there was enough equipment for training, and this I have been repeatedly anxious to stress. If the Territorial Army were to be constantly told that this were not so —when in fact it was—clearly they would cease to display that enthusiasm and understanding which they have shown in such ample measure in their work."

Regarding equipment, Mr. Hore-Belisha said although experts had talked about, sketched out and made pilot models of the 3.7 inch gun, it was not until last year that it was finally approved in design.

"One of the best established of propositions with major items of equipment is that a period of from 18 months to two years, or more, must elapse between the decision as to design and the coming into regular production.

"Nevertheless, there is regular production of the 3.7 inch gun.

"Factories have had to be built. Plant has had to be assembled; men have had to be trained to the work.

DEFICIENCY OF TECHNICAL MEN.

"When we come to precision instruments to be utilised with the guns, there has been and is in this country a serious deficiency of available highly technical personnel of experience. It takes, I am told, three years to train such men.

"The omissions of nearly two decades could not, unfortunately, even with a complete upheaval of our economy have been rectified in two years.

"When impatience is expressed with the fulfilment of our armament programme which, be it remembered is a programme and not an instantaneous creation, it must be recognised that under our present system nothing can guarantee appreciable acceleration of it, nor can there be an appreciable enlargement of it in the given time.

"There is a shortage of skilled men at particular places on particular tasks. A private manufacturer making some article of equipment has also his own normal trade to consider and, naturally, can exercise his own discretion as to when or whether an order is advantageous to him or what should be its priority having regard to his long term connections.

"To obtain an appreciable acceleration or an appreciable enlargement within the given time of our armament programme it would be necessary to revive the wartime method under which every other consideration is subordinated to this.

"A Ministry of Munitions to be effective must have full powers to allot orders, to assign priorities, to control the supply of materials, and to make arrangements for the diversions of skilled labour. These would be fundamental changes."

Mr. Hore-Belisha was speaking at a dinner given by the county of Glamorgan Territorial Army and Auxiliary Air Force Association at the City Hall.

Referring to one of our narrowest escapes from war he paid a tribute to the Prime Minister, who "by a personal activity and inspiration was rewarded both for his works and for his faith."

"We must be grateful also," he said, "that the nation which he leads has not folded the arms which acclaimed him, but is ready to set its hands to other tasks which may convert the respite into an enduring peace."

CHURCH ORNAMENTS

STONE ALTAR ILLEGAL.

REMOVAL ORDERS TO STAND

COURT OF ARCHES' DECISION.

Judgment was given yesterday in the Court of Arches, London, in an appeal by the Vicar of St. Hilary, Cornwall, against an order for the removal of a number of ornaments from his church.

The appeal was brought by the Rev. Charles Geoffrey Roffe-Silvester. The respondent was Miss Ann Maria King, of St. Hilary, on whose petition a Truro Diocesan Order was made for the removal of the ornaments which include six stone altars and several "witch-watching" balls installed in the church by the late vicar (the Rev. Bernard Walke), who retired in 1936.

Mr. W. N. Stable, K.C., deputy for the Dean of the Arches, in his judgment, quoting from two previous decisions on the same point, held that the altar of a parochial church, if made of stone, was illegal. Whether these judgments were open to review in the light of more recent cases was a question which must be left to the determination of the Privy Council. The Chancellor's order for the removal of the high altar and the substitution of a Holy table must stand.

Regarding five subsidiary stone altars, Mr. Stable held that the Chancellor had discretion, not merely to refrain from issuing a faculty authorising removal of all or any. He could, in exercise of that discretion, grant a faculty authorising their retention also.

CRUCIFIX AND CONFESSIONAL.

He saw no grounds for interfering with the Chancellor's order for the removal of the crucifix above the high altar. He also confirmed the Chancellor's order that the words "Holy Mother of God, pray for us and for those who came to the aid of this church in 1933" should be removed from a tablet on an image of the Virgin Mary.

The order for the removal of the confessional box was set aside. No confirmatory faculty would be granted at this stage, but the vicar, when the box had been removed to another part of the church or shortened, could apply for a confirmatory faculty.

Mr. Stable granted an application on behalf of the vicar for leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

Mr. J. P. Ashworth, for Miss King, was also formally given leave to appeal if he thought it necessary.

"MODERN PORTIA"

DISPUTED CONDITION OF HOUSE.

Rebutting evidence by the plaintiffs was given in the Chancery Division yesterday in the action brought by the Bradford Third Equitable Benefit Building Society against Mrs. Elsy Florence Eva Borders, wife of a taxi driver, who is conducting her own case and has been described as "a modern Portia."

The society sought possession of a house at Kingsway, West Wickham, Kent, on the ground that Mrs. Borders was at the date of the issue of the writ three months in arrear with her repayments of an advance of £693 made on the security of a mortgage.

Mrs. Borders denied being in arrear with her payments, and counter-claimed damages, alleging that she had been "wilfully and fraudulently misled" by the society into the belief that the house was good security for the amount advanced. She also contended that the mortgage sued upon was ultra vires the powers of the society, and invalid.

The Society denied that there had been any misrepresentation or that the transaction was void in law.

After Mr. Robert Vincent Boughton, building surveyor and structural engineer, had given evidence about the house today, Mrs. Borders asked the judge, "Is there anything else I can ask him?"

"Nothing," Mr. Justice Bennett replied. "From what he says I should have thought it would be much better to pull this house down and build a new one."

Charles Richard Meeson, who described himself as "more or less" a rent collector and inquiry agent, called on behalf of the building society, said that Mrs. Borders had never complained to him of defects or said that she paid under protest.

Colonel Maurice Kershaw Matthews, an architect, said that the house struck him as a fair specimen of the cheaper, speculatively-built house. It was not badly built.

Colonel Matthews declared that the foundations of the house were adequate, and that there was no "undue risk" of settlement. The damp he saw was due to condensation and no other cause. The roof showed no sign of sagging.

The hearing was adjourned until Tuesday.

THE ULSTER DIVISION.

OFFICERS' ANNUAL DINNER.

The twentieth dinner of the 36th (Ulster) Division Officers' (Old Comrades) Association in the Grand Central Hotel, Belfast, on Friday night proved one of the best of these celebrations.

Major-General Clifford Coffin, V.C., C.B., D.S.O., crossed specially from England to preside. He had also presided at the first, eighth, and eleventh dinners of the association, and members were glad to see him once more.

The members and their guests dining included Colonel W. H. Savage, C.M.G.; Commander Oscar Henderson, C.V.O., C.B.E., D.S.O.; Major F. Y. C. Knox; Lieut.-Colonel Sir William Allen, D.S.O., M.P.; Lieut.-Colonel J. G. Johnston, D.S.O., M.C.; Majors G. J. Apperson, M.C.; J. C. Boyle, D.L.; H. R. Haslett, chairman of the association; A. C. Herdman, O.B.E.; Rev. F. J. Halahan, M.A., M.C.; E. R. H. May, D.S.O.; J. Sproule Myles, M.C., T.D.; Hamilton Clendining, D.S.O.; Robert Workman, E. F. Lepper, M.C.; R. D. Williams, M.C.; J. Gorman, D.I., R.U.C.; Captains R. F. Henry, William Scott, D.S.O., M.C.; W. M. Knight, M.C.; John Ross, J. Maynard Sinclair, J. H. A. Patton, M.C., J. C. Leeper (Cookstown), S. J. Lyle, M.C. (Ballycastle), D. C. Lindsay, D.L., and the Right Hon. Lord O'Neill, H.M.L.; Lieut.-Colonel O. B. Graham, D.S.O.; Captain J. Patrick, M.C.; Major E. M. Tyler, M.C.; Captain A. O'N. Chichester, M.C.; Major H. C. Randall, Major Edmond Warnock, K.C., M.P.; Captain J. L. Bennet, Captain A. H. Muir, F.C.A., and Mr. James Curley, M.C.

Before the dinner, Major the Rev. F. J. Halahan made reference to "Fallen comrades" and to those who died during the year.

During the evening a telegram was received from his Majesty the King acknowledging the association's message of loyalty.

"The King" was the only toast.

The association's album, containing records of previous similar gatherings, including signatures of those who attended, was passed round and signed by members and guests.

His Grace the Duke of Abercorn, K.G., K.P., an honorary member, who has honoured the association on ten consecutive occasions, was, this time, unable to be present.

The following contributed to the musical programme:—Mr. Hootton Mitchell, songs which were encored, and Major R. D. Williams, M.C., sang "South Down Militia." The Grand Central Hotel band played war time songs and other items throughout the evening. Major J. Sproule Myles, M.C., T.D., gave a humorous item.

LORD CAREW RETIRES FROM ARMY

Lord Carew, who is a captain in the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, retired from the Army on Thursday, receiving a gratuity, it was stated in Friday night's "London Gazette." Lord Carew is 33.

Recently it was announced that he had changed his surname to Conolly-Carew on taking over the Conolly estate in Ireland.

THE BRITISH SPIRIT.

£100 GIFT TOWARDS AEROPLANE COST.

AGED WOMAN'S PATRIOTISM

MAN GIVES £500 TO NAVY LEAGUE.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has received £100 towards the cost of an aeroplane from an old lady.

This is intended as a substitute for war work which age prevents the donor from undertaking.

It is understood that she is 89 years of age. She desires to remain anonymous.

The old lady, in sending the gift, expresses sorrow that owing to age she is unable to take an active part in the defence work of the country. In these circumstances she wishes the hundred pounds to be regarded as some contribution towards the cost of an aeroplane, and she expresses the hope that many other old ladies may take similar action.

THE CHANCELLOR'S THANKS.

Sir John Simon has accepted the gift, and in doing so expressed his sincere thanks for it, and his warm appreciation of the spirit which prompted it.

A donor who desires to remain anonymous called on Friday at the stall of the Navy League in Trafalgar Square, London, where funds are being collected for the League's Flag Day.

After he had left the envelope which he handed over was found to contain a cheque for £500.

TENSION AT MEMEL

OVER ACTION TAKEN BY GOVERNOR.

VETOES THE DIET'S LAWS.

"BACK TO GERMANY" THREAT.

The wave of excitement which swept over every German minority in Eastern Europe, after Herr Hitler's entry into Sudetenland, has not yet ebbed in the Memel territory, which, until the Versailles Treaty, had for centuries been Germany's outpost in the north, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

Among leading Germans in Memel, indignation has been aroused to fever pitch by the decision of the Governor of the Memel territory, M. Kubilius, who has just returned from Kaunas, the Lithuanian capital, to veto two laws passed by the Memel Diet on October 6.

These laws were intended to put a stop to the influx of Lithuanian workers and craftsmen, which has recently intensified the unemployment problem in the Memel territory.

Germans point to the fact that, under Article 5 of the Memel Statute, labour legislation falls within the competence of the local authorities of the Memel territory.

The Lithuanians maintain that the new legislation does not conform with the principles of the Lithuanian Statute.

LITHUANIANS' ERROR.

Whatever the legal rights, it is hard to resist the conclusion that the Lithuanians have made a great mistake in providing the Germans with further ground for agitation. Already the German leaders are claiming that the reception of the labour laws was a test case and that the Lithuanians have now proved their determination to prevent the proper working of autonomy in the Memel territory.

The special meeting of the Diet, called for yesterday, to protest against the Lithuanian law for the protection of the State—which the Germans claim perpetuates the State of martial law, in force since 1926—was postponed at the last moment.

German leaders told me that they had received informal assurances that Lithuania would adopt a conciliatory attitude if the sitting was cancelled, and they now complain that they have been betrayed.

The atmosphere in Memel is now so tense that a campaign in defence of the somewhat loosely defined autonomous rights granted to Memel may be transformed at any moment to a "back to the Reich" demand. The white stockings, which were a mark of the Sudeten German Party, are now to be seen on the legs of young Memel Germans.

If the Lithuanians lose Memel, which, unlike the Sudetenland, is of no strategic or economic importance to Germany, it will be a case of wasted opportunities.

There is an impression in Berlin that the brake may be applied by Berlin if the Memel Germans move too far. Some months are likely to pass before the Reich will be ready to swallow any more territory.

SAMARITAN POUND DAY.

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT HOSPITAL.

Owing to the recent family bereavement her Grace the Duchess of Abercorn was unable to receive the gifts at the Samaritan Hospital, Belfast, Pound Day on Friday. In her absence they were received by Lady Coates, president, and Mrs. Oscar Henderson, chairman of "Pound Day" Committee.

There was a good attendance of friends and supporters of the hospital and it is anticipated that the proceeds will be quite equal to if not exceed last year's. The majority of the visitors inspected the building before leaving.

During the past few months both the large wards, the surgical quarters and the nurses' sitting-rooms have been redecorated. A minor improvement, which adds much to the comfort of patients and nurses, is an individual light on each bed. There is also an individual plug for wireless. New equipment for the theatre will, it is hoped, be the next development in the hospital.

Lady Turner, who has organised a stall in connection with Pound Day, for several years, was again at her post. She was assisted by Mrs. J. W. Williames, Mrs. W. J. Thompson, Mrs. W. K. Gibson, Mrs. A. Blair and Mrs. Pollock.

Mrs. J. W. Haughton, chairman of committee, and Miss Margaret Holland, hon. secretary, were most attentive to all the guests. The tea arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Lyons, chairman of the House Committee; Mrs. D. Hutchinson, Mrs. Rogan, Mrs. Bodel, and Mrs. Chapman.

M.P. FINED FOR SPEEDING.

Captain Sir William Brass, M.P. for Clitheroe, Lancs, of The Albany (Piccadilly) was fined 20s at the Marylebone Police Court on a summons for driving a car between the speeds of 40-45 miles per hour in Avenue Road.

Sir William pleaded not guilty, and suggested that when the timing took place the police car was accelerating to overtake his car. He stated that it was very difficult to time a car from a following car.

ULSTER BRITISH LEGION QUEST.

WOMEN AND GREAT WAR

REPRESENTATIVE MOTHER

FOR WELSH PEACE HALL CEREMONY

The Northern Ireland British Legion Area has decided to institute at once a search for a representative woman who suffered in the last war to take part in the opening and dedication of the Hall of Nations at Cardiff on November 23 next.

The building has been erected personally by Lord Davies at a cost of £62,000, and there will be present at the opening ceremony representative mothers of all parts of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

"It is the mother who suffers most when international law, order and justice are set aside," Lord Davies said. "In the mothers who are thinking to-day of what war would mean to their children there is a great will of peace. I want this ceremony to be a focussing point for their fervent desire for peace, and I want the hall to be a permanent symbol of their desire."

It is felt that by having representative war women sufferers present that this building will be perhaps the first of its kind to be dedicated to the part played by the ordinary mother in time of war.

IDEAL BEHIND ENTERPRISE.

The woman to represent Northern Ireland will take her place with women from other districts in England, Scotland and Wales, and she will be given the opportunity, if she so desires, not only to take part in this opening ceremony, but to state what war means to people of her type.

The foundation stone of the Hall of Nations was laid in April, 1937, by Lord Halifax, who then said:—"This stone will stand for the fulfilment of a great dream and a great vision, which has been made possible in no small part by the generosity of Lord Davies."

The building stands in Cathays Park, the civic centre of Cardiff, on a site presented by the Cardiff County Council.

Apart from this building being dedicated to the cause of international peace and justice, it will serve a practical purpose. It will provide, for instance, much-needed office room for the headquarters of the King Edward VII. Welsh National Memorial Association, which is the Welsh national organisation for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis. The building will also be the headquarters of the Welsh National Council of the League of Nations Union.

FOUND NOT GUILTY OF MURDER.

MANSLAUGHTER PLEA.

HUSBAND GETS THREE YEARS.

A wife murder charge came to a dramatic end yesterday at Northamptonshire Assizes when, after the prosecution's opening address to the jury, the accused man pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter and was sentenced to three years' penal servitude.

The man, Albert Hedley Harrison (42), shoe operative, of Wharf Road, Higham, Ferrers, Northants, had been accused of murdering his wife, Mabel Annie Harrison (41), by strangling her on August 19.

The jury returned a formal verdict of not guilty on this charge.

DEATH OF ANTRIM WOMAN.

STRUCK BY MOTOR-CAR.

OPEN VERDICT AT INQUEST.

Death from shock and hemorrhage following fracture of the skull and laceration of the brain when struck by a motor-car driven by David M. Campbell, Greenmount Agriculture College, was the verdict returned at the inquest at Antrim on Friday afternoon on Mrs. Ellen Reid (42), Dungonnell, Antrim.

Dr. Hall Stewart, Deputy Coroner, conducted the inquiry; Head-Constable Stanton represented the police, and Mr. Harold Jefferson appeared for the driver of the car involved in the accident.

Constable Hatton said he was called to the scene of the accident at 1-25 a.m. that day. He said Campbell, driver of the car, told him the lights of an oncoming car blinded him and he was on top of the people before he knew.

Mrs. Ellen Gibb deposed she was returning from a concert in Dungonnell Orange Hall with Mrs. Reid and witness's two children. They were close to the grass verge on the left-hand side of the road. Witness was in front with one little girl, and Mrs. Reid behind with the other. Suddenly she was aware of a bump from behind and saw Mrs Reid being thrown in front of the car. Witness did not hear a car or see lights before the accident.

David M'Quillan said he was driving a car from Antrim to Dungonnell and met Mrs. Gibb and Mrs. Reid on the road. They were close to the left-hand side going towards Antrim. After passing them he met Campbell's car, which was on the crown of the road between two rows of cars parked at the Orange Hall, and Campbell then drew into his own side. Witness stopped at the hall and saw Mrs. Gibb running back for help.

Medical evidence by Dr. William Graham followed.

The jury returned an open verdict as stated.

HOSPITAL TRIUMPH.

MILLION TO ONE CHANCE.

CHILD RECOVERS FROM TETANUS.

Scunthorpe War Memorial Hospital medical and nursing staff have just won a million to one battle in saving the life of ten years' old Jean Hogg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hogg, of Diana Street, Scunthorpe.

Within seven days of the child sustaining a cut tetanus developed. The child was rushed to hospital, and anti-tetanus serum was injected, but she made no response.

An S.O.S. message to London resulted in a further supply of serum being rushed by car to North Lincolnshire.

A further injection did not give any result, but the child continued to live, and a third injection was made. This brought a faint hope.

No child, according to medical history, has been saved when tetanus developed in such a short space of time, but with day and night attention the girl recovered, and yesterday was with her parents.

KING CAROL VISITING ENGLAND.

It was officially stated yesterday that the King of Roumania has accepted the invitation of the King and Queen to pay his postponed State visit to London from Tuesday, November 15 to Friday November 18. He will be accompanied by the Crown Prince.

King Carol was last in this country in July, 1937, when, having arrived incognito, he saw Mr. Chamberlain.

Czecho-Slovakian coup has re- he bugbear of Balkan linen com- n the States.

Sudeten linen firms were noted for tting, which is not surprising is remembered that the average slovakian linen worker con- teen shillings a good weekly for longer hours at that than tolerated here.

from the fact that German tex- now practically unsaleable in wing to the general boycott, it t that in future the Sudeten linen industry, like that of will have to reckon with con- higher costs of production the assimilation of their cur- the Reichsmark.

the first six months of this year figures available) Czecho-Slovakia ted to the U.S.A. some 32 tons of ached plain linen, worth 975,000 583 tons of bleached or lye- linen worth 16,796,000 crowns; of dyed or printed plain linen 5,621,000 crowns, and considerable tities of damask and other goods.

We are indebted to the American Consul-General in Belfast for a statement ing the declared exports from Nor- n Ireland to the United States for quarter ended September 30, 1938. This reveals that in that period exports of hackled flax totalled 219 tons, worth £35,000; linen yarn, 239,637 lbs., worth £24,000; plain linen fabrics (under 4 ozs.), 373,536 lbs., worth £106,000; ditto but over 4 ozs., 48,863 lbs., worth £4,950; table damask, etc., 207,782 lbs., worth £28,337; unhemmed handkerchiefs, worth £13,000; hemstitched handkerchiefs, worth £10,930; and embroidered handkerchiefs, worth £990. The value of sheets and pillowcases exported was £4,400, towels and napkins (under 120 threads) £6,100, and over 120 threads £43,330.

Gloomy Shipment Figures.

The September shipment figures provide far from pleasant reading, but this is understandable of a period comparable only with the hectic days of August, 1914.

The figures of wholesale trading, prepared by the Wholesale Textile Association in collaboration with the Bank of England, for September reveal that the totals for both home and export show a serious decline compared with last year. The concensus of opinion is that until the middle of the month trade was well holding its own, but upon the approach of the international crisis the figures declined, and this setback grew as the crisis developed.

Values of United Kingdom linen exports for the first nine months of this year register the huge decline of £1,857,271 on the figures for the corresponding period of 1937. It is noteworthy that the reduction in U.S.A. purchases of piece-goods, damasks, and handkerchiefs alone is directly accountable for £948,823 of this shrinkage. Similarly, China, which imports Ulster linen in the piece for embroidery for the U.S.A. market, has cut down her purchases of these goods by £227,637 in the first nine months of this year as compared with the corresponding 1937 figures.

Analysing the figures compiled by the Board of Trade for the year to September 30, 1938, we find that piece-goods shipments have shrunk by £1,287,151 in the past nine months, and that the U.S.A. and China jointly are responsible for £1,014,576 of this deficit.

Australia, South Africa, India, and other British countries (excluding Canada and New Zealand) have increased their piece-goods purchases in the same period by £76,154 to a total of £827,916. Canadian piece-goods buying, on the other hand, has declined from £192,188 to £148,500, and that of New Zealand by £78,801 to £70,721. Madeira buying has waned from £70,422 to £44,928, Cuban by £148,221 to £107,759, and Argentinian by £123,509 to £97,520. Linen thread shipments have declined from £258,818 to £247,738 in the first nine months of this year, towel shipments from £177,447 to £106,454, canvas shipments from £240,387 to £159,980, and "all other linen and hemp manufactures" from £426,155 to £33,478.

Exports of damask table linen are down by £156,930 to £386,633; all but £39,579 of this lag in sales being due to poor U.S.A. buying. Similarly handkerchief exports have ebbed from £208,441 to £131,248; the U.S.A. being the chief culprit to the extent of £41,551.

Piece Goods Trade.

Last month shipments of piece-goods to India, South Africa, and "foreign countries" (excluding U.S.A., China, Brazil and Argentina), were slightly heavier than those of the previous September piece-goods exports d plain bleached £107,732 (£6,214 decline), plain unbleached £34,594 (£20,292 decline), and printed and dyed £58,329 (a £30,250 decline). Canvas and sailcloth exports shrunk by 620; damask by £2,436; towelling by damask table linen by £33,677, handkerchief exports by £14,003 on the corresponding figures for last year.

Included in the imports into the United Kingdom last month were flax line and tow yarns £30,227, an increase £24,025. This may appear strange due to the high efficiency of our mills, to the fact that there is a 10 per duty against foreign spins, but there is but little doubt that the solution problem is temporary French competition due to the depreciation in the franc.

The realisation by British spinners of the danger of war is reflected by the fact that U.K. flax imports rose last month to £179,025, an increase of £88,422, and tow imports to £57,773, an increase of £41,690. September imports of linen and hemp piece-goods totalled £12,159, a decrease of £1,651; and "all other manufactures of linen and hemp" £4,728, a decrease of £9,423.

It is quite evident that the September beating of war drums scared away a lot of business and that a number of shipments were postponed due to the insurance rates soaring as the crisis approached its climax. The lack of American buying is very disheartening, although this may be largely explained away by the theory that Transatlantic buyers are rationing their purchases drastically while awaiting more favourable tariff rates. It is certain that U.S.A. linen stocks must now be near low-water mark as purchases this year are lagging well over a million pounds behind the corresponding indents of 1937.

Features of the Week.

Irish flax is now coming into the country markets more freely, and selling at from 8s 6d to 10s 6d per stone. Twenty-four tons changed hands at Ballymena on Saturday; Ballymoney (two markets), 15 tons; Coleraine, 1½ tons; Ballymoney, 11 tons; and Strabane 6 tons. Irish mixed scutching tow is selling at 5s per cwt. Certain grades of Soviet and Baltic fibre have fallen slightly in price because of an improvement in the sterling exchange, whilst other grades are firm and tending dearer. French spinners, armed with handsome contracts by the French War Office, continue to operate extensively in the Belgian and Baltic markets, and this is a factor which tends to advance prices.

Scutching in the Courtrai district is now getting into its stride, and the new crop is said to be yielding well. The fibre, on the whole, is of better grade than the 1937 vintage, and a very level dark colour. New crop Holland flax is in good demand, and this week some choice Blue Dutch sold at Rotterdam at prices equivalent to £105 c.i.f., Belfast, and Yellow Dutch at up to £110.

The tone of the Ulster linen market is quiet, but confident. Spinners are sticking out for better prices in view of the raw material position, and will curtail production rather than offer concessions which they cannot afford to grant. The cloth market is very patchy, but it is obvious that there is much business to be placed when the outlook clears.

The Ulster industry mourns the death of Mr. Robert Withers, Whiteabbey, a very popular figure in the trade and a great expert on linen weaving. For some years Mr. Withers was manager of the damask weaving department of Wm. Ewart & Son's, Crumlin Road Factory, before taking up the position of manager of the weaving department of the Whiteabbey Flax Spinning Co., Ltd. Mr. George Combe, Lisburn, who died this week, was a descendant of Mr. Abraham Combe, the pioneer in flax machinery design, who founded Falls Foundry, Belfast.

Flax and tow values:—Irish flax, £64 to £88; IV. Group Slanetz, £90 to £91, basis 1; Ralo tow No. 8 £70 to £71; Latvian Livonian, £71 to £72, basis R.; Werro-Petschory halves, £70 to £71, basis R.; Lithuanian, Group I. flax, £62 to £63, basis R.; all per ton c.i.f. U.K. Nominal values in Ulster of machine hackled, water retted tows—Courtrai, £66 (roughing), £70 No. 1, £74 No. 2, £78 Nos. 3-4. Irish, £58 (roughing), £61 No. 1, £64 No. 2, £67 Nos. 3-4. Baltic £54 (roughing), £56 No. 1, £58 No. 2; £60 Nos. 3-4. Nominal Irish linen yarn values:—Sheer warps 90's to 110's 7s 4½d, 150's 8s 6d per bundle; cambric warps, 75's to 85's 7s 4½d, 100's 7s 9d per bundle. Tow wefts, 12's 15s 6d per bundle, 14's 13s 6d per bundle, 40's 7s 6d per bundle. Line wefts, 40's 9s per bundle, 50's 8s per bundle, 80's to 130's 6s 9d per bundle, 140's 7s 10½d and 150's 7s 10½d per bundle; all per bundle of 60,000 yards of grey yarn, average quality. Nominal Scottish dry spun linen yarn values:—Tow weft 3lbs. 3s per spindle, 3½lbs. 3s 3d per spindle, 4lbs. 3s 6d per spindle. Tow warp, 3½lbs. 3s 8d, 4lbs. 3s 11d, 5lbs. 4s 7d. Flax warp, 2½lbs. 3s 6d, 3lbs. 4s, all per spindle. Flax warp, 4lbs. to 5lbs. 1s 3½d per lb, 2½lbs. flax 3-ply 1s 8½d per lb., 2½lbs. flax 3-ply 1s 6½d per lb. Under the Scottish system of yarn numbering the yarn number indicates the weight of a spindle or spangle of 48 cuts or 14,400 yards.

Lancashire Cotton Market.

Quite good business has been done during the week on the Liverpool cotton market. No quality has been in special demand, but each appears to have come in for a fair amount of buying. "Spot" prices are firm in spite of a slight easing during the last few days, but prices of "futures" are not so strong.

The yarn market is featureless. The export returns for September show an increase over the figures of the past few months, but are less than the corresponding figure for last year. Australia, Norway, Denmark, Yugo-Slavia and Uruguay show the principal increases, together with Germany, to which the export of grey yarn is, with one exception, greater than in any month since the beginning of 1932.

Cloth prices have advanced fairly stiffly in sympathy with the rise in price of the raw material. This has brought out a certain amount of business and a good deal more inquiry. Bulk lines have not gone through in sufficient quantities to alter the general tone of the market. Most of the Eastern markets, with the exception of China and Hong Kong, are sending forward their quota of miscellaneous orders, but as a rule the firm tone of our market is preventing anything but a spasmodic trade being done. This applies to the Continent and other markets as well.

KING OF JAIL BREAKERS

GIVEN A FURTHER SENTENCE

PARIS, Friday.—Armand Jean Spilers, "king of jail breakers," who has twice been away from Devil's Island, was to-day in Paris sentenced to 10 months' imprisonment for breaking out of the Santé Prison on March 20, 1936.

Since he is already serving a life sentence for killing a gendarme, however, the sentence was merely formal. He has been in prison now for 18 months, and has been given no chance of escaping. He is said to be watched day and night by armed warders.

After the second of his two escapes from Devil's Island he made a fortune in Venezuela, but misguidedly returned to France to spend his money as a race-horse owner.

Arrested on a minor charge he was imprisoned and escaped again. While carrying out a burglary at St. Jean de Luz he was intercepted by a policeman, whom he shot dead. Even then he escaped, but only for a short time. That was his last spell of freedom.—Central News.

ALLAM'S WEEKLY SALES.

BIG SUPPLIES OF SHEEP AND PIGS.

The entry totalled over 1,000 head at the weekly autumn sale of breeding sheep held by Messrs. R. J. Allam, Ltd., on Friday. The sales will continue until November 11.

Mr. John M'Kee sold 65 choice ewes, which made from 33s to 37s each; Mr. D. M'Kee sold a pen at 35s 6d, and Mr. M'Allister received 35s each for a lot of 12; second grade blackface ewes ranged from 22s t 28s. Notwithstanding the lateness of the season numerous entries of crossbred ewes were forward, and included 12 from Mr. Robert Jennings, which realised 37s 6d each; other pens made from 28s to 36s 6d.

At the weekly sale of fat sows and boars average supplies were on offer, and the usual buyers were in attendance. First grade York sows sold from 38s to 41s 6d per live cwt., second grade 35s to 37s, and soft types less money according to condition. The highest figure for sows was £11, and for boars £5 10s.

D.W.D. Whiskey deservedly approved.

"GENTLEMEN'S WAR"

STATE GOVERNOR AND SOUTH AFRICA.

NO GAS, NO BOMBING THEN.

Men who fought in the Boer War should congratulate themselves on the fact that it was "a gentlemen's war," according to Sir Winston Dugan, Governor of South Australia.

Addressing members of the South African War Veterans' Association at their annual reunion at Adelaide he said:—

"At times our rations were small and we suffered from a shortage of water, but it was a war where we could say that there was honourable and soldierly conduct on both sides. There were none of the abominations which we have been told recently may descend upon us in the event of a future war.

"There was no gas in those days and there were no aeroplanes dropping bombs on us. Both sides fought valiantly and fought well."

FIVE YEARS' WORLD CRUISE.

"You can expect us back in five years," said Mr. Bradford Potter who, with a crew of four, will leave Sydney shortly in his ketch Fram on a world cruise. One of the places he intends to visit is England in which country he says they will spend two years.

Mr. Potter plans to make the main stopping points, Thursday Island; Dutch East Indies; Singapore; Phillipine Islands, and Vancouver, before proceeding to Southampton via the Panama.

Many people have written to Mr. Potter asking to be taken on the cruise. They have volunteered to pay for the experience, while a large number of the hundreds of letters received were from women offering their services as cook or nurse.

VALUABLE ART DISCOVERY.

One of the most sensational art discoveries of recent years has been made in Rome by experts wandering through a fifteenth-century house which for years was the home of the early Renaissance artist, Andrea Mantegna. A series of frescoes found in one room, which have been unidentified for hundreds of years, are now stated to be the work of Mantegna himself.

The frescoes are a series of nine scenes on "the Triumph of Cæsar." A series of tempera paintings on the same subject was completed by Mantegna in 1490. The paintings were acquired by Charles I. and placed in Hampton Court, where they are now. It is believed that the newly-discovered frescoes were actually executed before the tempera. Arrangements are being made for the frescoes to be carefully removed from the building. They will be lodged in the State Art Gallery at Mantua.

Mantegna, who lived from 1431 to 1506, became famous at an early age. His work was to be found in the houses of the most powerful and noble families of Renaissance Italy. In later years, however, he became heavily in debt, and despite his many affluent friends, passed the last years of his life in poverty. His work is represented in art galleries throughout the world, notably the National Gallery in London, the celebrated Prado at Madrid, the Berlin Museum, the Paris Louvre, and the Brera, Milan.

ARRESTED THRICE A WEEK.

One of the biggest worries to the New York police is Abe Goldstein who, it was stated, prides himself on the fact that he holds the record for being the most frequent visitor to the police station—at the law's request. Abe, who boasts that he has been arrested "hundreds of times," and at least "three times a week," has now landed himself before the magistrate on the same old charge—of selling pea-nuts in Central Park.

Although Abe is used to being reprimanded he was shocked and not a little hurt when the magistrate imposed a fine of 25 dollars (£5) or ten days. To show his independence, Abe has taken the ten days.

ULSTER MILK FUND.

ITS WORKING FOR A YEAR.

SOME INTERESTING DETAILS.

Statistics relating to the administration of the Northern Ireland Milk Fund are contained in a Government White Paper giving an account of the income and expenditure of the fund for the year ended March 31, 1938.

The total receipts of £238,977 5s 1d include a balance brought in of £98,200 9s 4d. Producers' licence fees realised £20,460 1s 8d, made up of—Grade A, £365 16s 1d; Grade B, £3,840 8s 5d; and Grade C, £16,253 17s 2d. The corresponding amounts collected for distributors' licence fees were—Grade A, £271 10s 5d; Grade B, £6,552 5s 4d; Grade C £15,512 12s 9d, a total of £22,236 8s 6d. Licence fees in respect of butter and margarine brought in £65,715 17s 10d, and a sum of £30,087 1s 3d represented the Milk Industry Assistance grant. A sum of £59 13s was recovered in fines, and £452 4s in costs and legal charges. Interest on deposits and bank interest realised £1,624, 17s 2d.

The payments made during the year amounted to £128,831 12s 10d. Of this sum £33,870 19s 4d was issued in equalisation payments to creameries and suppliers, and £746 17s 1d to prescribed undertakings and suppliers. Bonus payments issued to producers totalled £45,235 1s 4d, representing in respect of Grade A £131 5s, Grade B, £1,334 1s 4d, and Grade C £43,769 15s. Licence fees were repaid to producers and distributors to the extent of £115 12s 1d. The expenses of administration absorbed £48,810 13 10d, which includes a balance for 1936-37 of £2,405 7s 6d. The principal expenses were:—Salaries, wages and allowances—(a) members of Joint Milk Council, £157 10s; (b) veterinary and laboratory services, £5,264 1s 6d; (c) general administration, (licensing, inspection, bonus and equalisation payments, milk and butter, etc., levy collection), £26,893 18s 11d; superannuation, £4,160 3s 4d; travelling and subsistence allowances, £4,141 19s 1d; postage, telegrams and telephones, £1,285 0s 4d; advertising, £128 7s 1d; equipment, £527 5s 10d; incidentals, £474 6s 1d; costs and legal charges, £1,193 1s 8d; works services, £1,419 1s 8d; stationery, etc. services, £760 10s 10d. The balance at the bank on 31st March last was £110,145 12s 3d.

Sums amounting to £363 6s 2d in respect of licence fees, and £27 8s 9d in respect of legal costs deemed to be irrecoverable were written off during the year. In addition to the sum written off it is estimated that there was a further loss of approximately £2,250 by reason of the Ministry's decision that it would be neither equitable nor practicable to enforce certain provisions of the Act in the Londonderry area until a final decision was reached in the legal action to prevent the sale in Northern Ireland of milk which was produced outside Northern Ireland. Licence fees have been collected in this area as from September 1, 1937. A further sum of £843 6s 4d in respect of the balance of legal costs incurred by the Ministry in defending the action by the Donegal milk vendors was deemed to be irrecoverable.

PEER'S SISTERS TO HAVE TITLES.

The "London Gazette" announces that the King has been pleased to "ordain and declare" that the sister of the young Baron Banbury, Miss Mary Heritage Banbury, is in future to have the same title, rank, place, pre-eminence, and precedence as the daughter of a baron as she would had her father lived and succeeded to the title.

Similarly, the sister of the Earl of Chesterfield (Mrs. Alexander Browne) will have the title which would have been due to her if her father had succeeded to the title of Earl of Chesterfield.

SUNDAY FEATURES.

LORD CARSON MEMORIAL.

THE CATHEDRAL CEREMONY.

On Sunday at 3-30 p.m. the Service of Dedication of the Memorial Plaque to Lord Carson of Duncairn will be broadcast from St. Anne's Cathedral, Belfast.

The Memorial Plaque will be unveiled by the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, Right Hon. the Viscount Craigavon, and dedicated by the Very Rev. W. S. Kerr, Dean of Belfast, and prayers will be offered by the Right Rev. W. F. Currie, D.D., Moderator of the General Assembly. The Rev. T. J. Allen, President of the Methodist Church, will read the lesson.

Ida O'Reilly gives a Violoncello Recital at 4-40, and at 6-55 the services from St. Patrick's Parish Church, Ballymoney, will be broadcast, the address being given by the Rev. John Powell, Rector of St. Mary's, Donnybrook, and Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin.

FRANCE AND THE AIR

MINISTER'S TWO-YEAR PLAN

ENTIRE FORCE TO BE REORGANISED

PARIS, Friday.—Following attacks in the French Press on the failure of the Government to achieve a satisfactory rate of air force expansion M. Guy la Chambre, the Air Minister, to-day outlined his policy in two Press interviews and revealed the details and plans of the reorganisation of the Air Force

M. la Chambre said that 4,800 aeroplanes are to be constructed for the French Air Force by April, 1940. These machines are the basis of a two-year plan to reorganise the Air Force, which was decided upon at a meeting of the Higher Air Council last February, and they will ensure that France has a permanent Air Force of 2,617 'planes, a figure which has already been published.

The cost of the programme will be in the neighbourhood of £90,000,000.

Between April 1, when the plan came into operation, and September 1 only 240 'planes had been turned out owing primarily to the difficulties of completely reorganising the aviation industry.

This means that 'planes will in future have to be built at a monthly rate of more than 250 if the programme is to be carried out in time At the moment the Air Minister envisages a monthly output of only 200 machines.

BRITISH AIR ARRANGEMENTS.

The Air Ministry announced last night they have concluded arrangements with Messrs. Vickers, Armstrong, Ltd., for the creation, with the aid of their whole organisation, of a widespread sub-contracting system to be employed on the manufacture of aircraft.

This system will feed component parts for final assembly into a new central factory to be controlled by Messrs. Vickers. The necessary sub-contracts are already being placed in connection with a large initial order, while active measures are in train for the provision of the central factory

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Ulster Competitions Already Under Way

By "Ace of Spades."

THE Bridge season has only just commenced and already those in charge of the Northern Ireland Bridge Union's affairs have done much to get the local competitions under way. I hope that this column will never appear to be an official organ of the Union, but I feel that I ought to devote some space, from time to time, to recording those activities which are of more particular interest to local players, consequently this article will deal inclusively with local affairs.

In the first place I should like to congratulate Prof. A. MacKinnon on being elected chairman for the ensuing year. He has done noble service for the Union and no one deserves the honour more than he does. I have no doubt but that it will continue to flourish under his guidance.

It is a matter of great satisfaction to all local players who take an interest in competitive bridge that Messrs. H. J. Miles and I. W. Seaton have consented to retain the key positions of hon. secretary and hon. competitions director respectively. In the past I have had occasion to remark on the most efficient manner in which they have discharged their very onerous duties, and it is admitted on all sides that neither position could be more competently filled.

League Competitions.

The Competitions Committee has decided to make no change in the conditions governing the league competitions this year. Thus, as in last season, there will be two divisions. The first division includes the eight teams included last year and the winners of the second division; while the second division will have nine or ten teams competing. As the season progresses I hope to be able to give some details of the results of matches in both divisions.

The annual congress will be held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, 10th, 11th, and 12th November, in the Grand Central Hotel. This fixture was very successful last year, and it is hoped that an even greater number of local players will take part this year. I understand that many prominent players from England, Scotland and Eire will be competing, and the experience to be gained from playing against, or even watching, these experts will be most useful and should enable local enthusiasts to improve in every aspect of the game.

Ulster Match with England.

Although there is very little serious bridge played here during the summer months the British Board of Control does not recognise any official off-season, and we find international bridge matches being played at all sorts of times. Our match against England was played in London at the beginning of this month and resulted in a decisive win for the English team. Our players, who had had little practice during the summer, were outclassed both in bidding and in play.

However, besides the lack of practice, there are one or two other points which must be pleaded in defence of our team. Owing to difficulties in getting players to travel it was only possible to send two partnerships instead of three. Consequently all four members of the team had to play throughout the match without a rest. This in itself was a severe handicap, and when it is remembered that the players had to travel to London and commence play a few hours after their arrival, it must be conceded that our chances of success were not very bright. Furthermore, only one of our pairs (Gabbey and Shanks) was a recognised partnership of long standing. The other pair, MacKinnon and Phillips, had only a short time to practice together. Mackinnon was playing a system to which he was not accustomed, and Phillips was playing in his first international match.

The English team consisted of two London pairs, including Harrison Gray and Simon one of the finest partnerships in the world, and a very strong Provincial pair, Beam and Westall. In the circumstances, and considering that the London players play bridge all through the year, the odds were decidedly on England.

A Brilliant Start.

Despite the great handicaps which I have mentioned, the Northern Ireland team started off in brilliant fashion and at the end of 33 boards actually led by 1,430 points. I have to record with pleasure that O. P. Phillips, although it was his first experience of international bridge, played almost faultlessly during this session. The English team had a slice of luck on board 34 and both Gabby and Shanks slipped in the bidding on board 35, with the result that the lead was reduced to a mere 130 points. The team held on to this lead for a further six boards, and indeed they gained a few more points. After 41 boards they led by 350 points. Then a tragedy occurred. Mackinnon made a slip in play on board 42. It was his only costly mistake in the match. England gained 720 points and took the lead never to lose it again.

Probably our players were tiring, and to see a substantial lead disappearing in a few hands was not calculated to inspire them to fresh efforts. The Englishmen continued to advance. Gradually they built up a commanding lead. At the end of the day's play they led by 3,420, with only twenty-eight more hands to go.

On the following day the Northern Ireland players made a great effort to reduce the lead. They regained 1,000 points on the first ten hands, but they had shot their bolt and in the last eighteen hands England gained a further 2,000 points to win by 4,300.

I have examined the records of the 100 hands played very carefully. While it is impossible to say what should have been done on every hand or what chances were missed in the play, it is clear that at least one of our players has very little to reproach himself with. That player is Professor Mackinnon, who celebrated his election to the chair of the union by giving a magnificent performance in this match. His record both in bidding and play was superior to that of any other member of either team.

A Good Augury.

In fairness to our other players I am bound to point out that, on the whole, the standard of play was much higher than in some of the previous international matches, when, despite inferior play, we achieved what appeared to be a better result. It augurs well for bridge in Ulster that our team, playing under the very severe handicaps to which I have referred, can produce as good bridge as they did in London. We can look forward to the new season with every confidence.

Just a word about my programme for this season's articles—last season I dealt with the main principles of approach forcing bidding. In this series I intend to set out in some detail the system which is employed by some of our leading players in Belfast and which for want of a better name has become known as Common-Sense Bridge. Next week's article will deal with the fundamental principles of common-sense bidding.

Have you seen "Autobridge?" It's now being demonstrated at Robinson & Cleaver. For beginners and experts alike it's the ideal form of "Solo" Bridge. 0686

FERRIER'S SEVENTEENTH TITLE.

SYDNEY, Saturday.—Jim Ferrier, holder of the Australian open and amateur titles, and formerly British amateur champion, has brought his total of championship victories in Australia to 17 by winning the New South Wales close event with a score of 281 for 72 holes. The runner-up, V. S. Richardson, was 13 strokes behind.

During a season of unprecedented success Ferrier has won the Australian Open for the first time, the National Amateur for the second time, Queensland Open second, Queensland Amateur third, New South Wales Amateur fourth, and New South Wales Close fifth. He has been beaten only in the Lakes Open—by N. Von Nida.

THE CESAREWITCH.

HORSES IN FINAL GALLOPS.

DUBONNET GOES WELL.

The Cesarewitch candidate Dubonnet moved well in his winding-up gallop of two miles on the racecourse side at Newmarket to-day. T. Lowrey had the mount on him. He was accompanied the first mile and a half by Alistair and Ashtoreth.

Sirtam went better than Scotch Woodcock and Mestre in his gallop of two miles. Queen's Shilling strode out well when sent a similar distance, High Tide jumping in for the last mile and a half.

Ridden by W. Griggs, Snipe Wood, looking very well, showed to advantage over a mile and a quarter with Sunburn.

Olympus (J. Gomez) did not please so much as Portmarnock (P. Beasley) in his spin of seven furlongs.

Other Cesarewitch candidates spins were:—Tapageur—seven furlongs at a good pace with three stable companions; Solonaise—seven furlongs with six other members of the Park Lodge stable; and Corofin—a good gallop of a mile with Lambton's Mormond Hill.

MINTER ANOTHER BRADMAN?

SYDNEY, Saturday.—Australian cricket experts have hopes that J. Minter, the 21-year-old Balmain batsman who scored the fastest century of the season in first grade cricket last year (100 in 34 minutes), will become another Bradman.

All Minter needs, in the opinion of experienced cricketers here, is experience in better company to polish his batting.

A prominent player says of him: "Minter is a bit rough at present, but with a good stylist at the other end, he would learn much and learn it quickly. He has a wonderful eye and remarkably quick footwork."

He will probably be given a trial in the New South Wales Colts' team.

LOSS TO BELLEVUE ZOO

A great loss to the Bellevue Zoo has been sustained this week in the death of Snowball, the large black Himalayan bear.

In spite of all medical assistance and constant attention by her keeper, she died during the night of Thursday last in giving birth to cubs.

Snowball has lived at Bellevue for the past three years, and was a great favourite both with the staff and the general public. She was particularly fond of children, and she seemed always delighted to show her tricks when young people were present.

She has two cubs, Audrey and William, born about two years ago, at present at the Zoo, and living in an adjoining den. These are playful little things, and were always allowed into their mother's den during the summer afternoons to enjoy a romp.

Snowball seemed to have come of a rather tragic family. No doubt it will be recalled that her sister died some considerable time ago when she swallowed a golf ball thrown to her by a careless visitor.

GOEBBELS'S BOAST.

WORLD HAS TO RECKON WITH US.

VERSION OF CZECH CRISIS.

WHY PREMIER WENT TO MUNICH.

Dr. Goebbels, Reich Propaganda Minister, in a remarkable speech at a mass meeting in the Hanseatic Hall, Hamburg, gave his version of events in the recent international crisis over Czecho-Slovakia.

Referring to the Munich Agreement, he said:—"Suppose this Chamberlain had not come, what would have happened? I can only say this Chamberlain did come. The Four-Power Congress did take place, and, believe me, they did not come because the French and British Prime Ministers had such an itching to go to Munich.

"They came because the West knew that we meant business and we are strong enough to mean business. It was a turning-point in our history. Now we are a world Power again. The world has to reckon with us.

"It was all a logical chain of development. Out of rearmament grew the occupation of the Rhineland, out of that the conquest of Austria, on the strength of our control of Austria—Sudetenland, and now, after all this, this miraculous achievement. In five years Germany became the greatest military Power in the world."

Without a single shot were conquered 10,000,000 Germans for the Reich this year. Some people say the Fuhrer had luck. Sure, he had luck, but luck alone is not sufficient. He had vision, imagination, a cool head and strong nerves. Not that alone either. No. The last 15 years, even before National Socialism came in, our struggle laid the foundations for our success.

He knew we needed guns and a big army. That meant great sacrifices at first in 1933-34 in order to achieve material profit later. To-day we reap the first harvest, and if we now set ourselves new aims and have to bear sufferings for their attainment we are just as sure to achieve them as we have just reached the goals we set ourselves five, ten, fifteen years ago.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA'S "FOLLY."

What folly for a small State to mobolise against a nation of 75,000,000, and just because we had not intended anything against them. We had planned a quiet summer. (Laughter and cheers.) They mobilised in May.

We did not reply immediately. Oh, no. We prepared carefully and cautiously. We did not address an immediate reply to Prague at all. Oh, no—quite a different geographical direction. We ordered the building of our fortifications in the West.

This meant, we said to the world, when we give our reply we want to be invulnerable in the West. When we clear up the mess in Central Europe, we want no more threats from the West. The thermometer of the international atmosphere rose, and tension increased and people out West started putting their heads together.

They said, "Something wrong here," and soon (as usual) they sent negotiators, mediators, and debating societies, and they did not understand that there was no chance of negotiations.

The Fuhrer shrouded himself in silence. He sat on the Obersalzburg and was invisible. Every time he made a speech they pricked their ears, but not a hint escaped his lips.

He went on quietly, called up troops, made military preparations, built fortifications, and the summer gave us a record harvest so that we were in no danger of food trouble.

So finally when at Nuremberg the Fuhrer stated his case clearly everybody knew . . . "now the pie is ready." Now, not only the Fuhrer spoke, but the hundreds of thousands of troops and our arms.

"FUHRER PLAYS CLEVER GAME."

The world is always against us. The question is only, "Can the world do anything against us?" Now the world is surprised that an old competitor appears again on the world market—one who had long been written off, one who appeared as if he no longer wanted to play on this international poker table. But there he is.

Not modest, not timid. No. Very astute, very cheeky and sly. He does not show his trumps. He draws them when the others least think he has got them. We had to set the time-limits. We know their Parliamentarian tricks, their dilatory tactics. We had to say, "By such and such a day we get what is ours or we draw the sword." That works.

I could confidently say to the Fuhrer at the sport palast in Berlin at the end of September, "There will be no new German capitulation like that in 1919."

The people also knew the Fuhrer plays a clever game. He'll win, the others are bluffing a bit. True they will concentrate a bit of a fleet, but in the end they'll come along because they don't want bloodshed.

I must say it is incomprehensible to me how a man like Cardinal Inniter can organise counter-demonstrations on the day when our army marches into the Sudetenland.

The little Catholic sheep come out of the church and say, "Innitzer, command and we follow you." And when the next day the street gave its answer and a few windows were broken the Catholic sheep called for the National Socialist police

That, Mr. Cardinal, can't be done. If you want to fight us come out into the open. We are ready to take up the gauntlet. What you do in the church is your affair. Now don't come out into the street. The street is ours.

VIENNA, Saturday. — The Sudeten-Deutscher Heimatbund, the Austrian branch of the Henlein movement, has expelled Cardinal Innitzer for "unnational behaviour."

Cardinal Innitzer, who was born in the Sudeten region, was made an hon. member of the Heimatbund in April this year for "national behaviour.—Reuter.

HOLYWOOD YACHT CLUB.

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.

The annual dance and presentation of prizes in connection with Holywood Yacht Club was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening. There were some 200 members and friends present. During an interval the Commodore, Dr. W. D. Donnan, J.P., paid a tribute to the work of the hon. secretary, Mr. W. Morrison. He also congratulated Mr. Hugh Shannon, jun., on winning for the fourth time in succession the Lipton Cup, and eulogised the work of the flag officers.

Mrs. Donnan presented the prizes as follows:—

Handicap class—Kelly Cup, Rice Memorial Cup, Lipton Cup, and 1st club prize to H. Shannon, jun. (Inca); Downing Cup, 3rd club prize, and 3rd crews' race prize, S. Lee (Lively); 2nd club prize, W. J. Irekon (Windhover).

Maiden class—N. M'Arthur (Cyrena) was awarded the Commodore's Cup, Vice-Captain's Cup, and 1st club prize; W. M'Kimm (Ellen), 2nd; and J. Close (Ena), 3rd.

Sharpie class—The Neill Cup, Fullerton Cup, and 1st club prize, F. W. Steen (Spindrift); Donnan Cup and 2nd club prize, G. Laing (Cyclone); S. Stevenson, 3rd club prize (Tempest); and C. Crichton and J. Mann (Ripple), 4th prize.

Ladies' prizes—Miss D. Harrison won the cup presented by the commodore; Miss M. Neeson, 2nd prize; Miss Myra Shannon, 3rd; Miss K. Brennan, 4th.

Remainder of the prize-winners in the crews' races were as follows:—Handicap class—1. S. M'Master (Marflo); 2, G. Watson (Merrymaid I.) Maiden class—1, F. Dunlop (Cyrena); 2, G. M'Kimm (Ellen). Sharpie class—1, H. Stevenson (Cyclone); 2, G. Cheatley (Spindrift); 3, W. M'Call (Ripple); 4, W. Mawhinney (Kelpie).

The music for the dancing was supplied by Mr. Bob Dyer's Dance Band. All the yachting clubs in Belfast Lough were represented at the dance.

Adolf Hitler

WHAT are Hitler's real aims? Can they be realised without the price of another world war? Is it impossible to have Hitler AND peace in Europe?

These are the questions the public are asking in Britain. To answer them the "Belfast Telegraph" next week will let Hitler himself speak—in a series of articles, setting forth the complete statement of his views as expressed by him in the authentic German version of his book, "Mein Kampf" ("My Struggle").

This book, written behind prison bars fourteen years ago, has become the bible of modern Germany. More than 4,000,000 copies have been sold of the German version alone.

It gives the whole philosophy of Nazi-ism. It will enable you to judge of Hitler for yourself.

The first article of the series, which will be published on our Centre Page on Monday, outlines the 25 points which embrace the unalterable essentials of the Nazi faith. Others will reveal what the master of modern Germany thinks of the other vital issues in the spotlight of world politics.

PHARMACY'S NEW PRESIDENT.

MR. W. C. TATE ELECTED.

VICE-PRESIDENT FROM DERRY.

A unique record in Irish pharmacy has been established by the election of Mr. Walter C. Tate, Royal Avenue, Belfast, as president of the Pharmaceutical Society of Northern Ireland. Mr. Tate's father, the late Mr. James Tate, was president of the Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland from 1915 to 1917.

MR. W. TATE.

Mr. Walter Tate, whose election took place at the meeting of the Council of the Northern Ireland Society on Friday evening, has been successively hon. treasurer and vice-president of the Society, to which he has rendered distinguished service. He succeeds Mr. S. H. Forrest, J.P., of Bangor.

MR. J. GLENDINNING.

The new vice-president of the Society is Mr. James Glendinning, a well-known figure in Derry and the North-West. Mr. H. F. Moore, of Belfast, was re-elected hon. treasurer for a second term.

THE ROUTE FIELD CLUB.

ANNUAL CONVERSAZIONE.

There were many interesting exhibits displayed at the annual conversazione of the Route Field Club, held in the Marine Hotel, Ballycastle, on Friday evening. The prizewinners at competitions, which took place during the evening, were:—Miss Irwin, Messrs. W. A. Green, Coleraine; J. Thompson, Coleraine, and H. A. Boyd.

A paper, entitled "The Story of Ballycastle Harbour—a Praiseworthy 18th Century Project," was read by Mr. H. A. Boyd.

Mr. A. M'L. May, president of the club, said that was the first time the annual conversazione had been held in Ballycastle, and he sincerely hoped it would not be the last. He expressed the club's pleasure at the presence of two members of the Belfast club, Miss W. J. Sayers and Mr. W. R. Skillen.

Thanks to the Ballycastle branch of the club for their hospitality and for the excellent arrangements made by the secretary, Miss Kilpatrick, B.Sc.; also to Mr. Boyd for his interesting lecture, was conveyed on the motion of Mr. W. P. Brown, B.A., LL.B., Coleraine, and responded to by Major Creery.

"RATHCOL'S" REVIEW

Taste And Interpretation In Music

An Age-old Problem.—No Such Thing As Absolute Perfection.—Dangerous Nonsense.—Standards There Must Be.—The Voice Of Tradition.

THE problem of taste, as was pointed out in last week's article, is a difficult one. It is an age-old problem, and it comes up perennially. The Latin tag "De gustibus non disputandum" goes back pretty far in history; but long before the days of Latin and Greek culture the problem of taste must have troubled mankind. We may be certain that it was a vexed question in that ancient Egypt about whose culture we are only on the fringe of discovery; and no doubt there was many a freeborn citizen of Tut-ankh-Amen's kingdom to write to the "Telegraph" of that time, signing himself "Music Lover," or "Civicus" or "Pro Bono Publico" (or to take whatever was the equivalent step of newspaper correspondence then) and to proclaim bravely, "I know what I like, and what I like is good enough for me."

The problem of the interpretation of a work of music is equally difficult. Indeed it is a collateral problem, for after all interpretation itself is determined by the dictates of individual taste, good or bad; and the pianist's fingers or the conductor's baton are as much the weapon of taste as is the pen of the composer. We may go the length of agreeing that the performer or conductor who re-creates a work is charged with an even more solemn responsibility than that of the original creator, since it is by his volition that the work, for what it is worth, stands or falls. The critics, and the critics' critics, no doubt have the last word; but their job (however helpful in the formation of public taste) is, so far as the work is concerned, only the rejoicing or lamenting over spilt milk.

A Fool or a Superman.

Neither of these problems will be finally determined in this dispensation; and the man, be he interpreter or composer or critic, who ventures to claim that he has found the absolute perfection of all art is either a fool or else a super-man, too good for this world and ready for translation to that higher sphere where, as we believe, there are no problems at all. The nearest we can get down here to a determination either of the intrinsic merits of a piece of music or a particular interpretation of that music is by reference to established standards.

I put that down as an absolute postulate. Yet at once we are up against two attendant difficulties. First, there is the question of how and by whom the standards themselves were fixed; and let me say at once that that other old Latin tag which informs us that the voice of the people is the voice of God is nonsense. From my youth up I was suspicious of that axiom, and my twelve years as the music critic of this journal have finally convinced me that it is nonsense and dangerous nonsense. If it were true, then "The Rose of Tralee" would be as fine a work of art as "The Erl King;" the late Mr. Edgar Wallace would rank as high as the late Mr. William Shakespeare; or, if you will, that sorry work of misguided genius, the "Wanderer-Fantasy" for piano and orchestra would rank as high as that superb song, "The Wanderer." So we should get back to "I know what I like," etc. Rather let us say that the voice of intelligent and informed opinion is the voice of God; or since we are in the way of recalling proverbs, let us recall the Turkish one which tells us that God helps them who help themselves. When a certain fifth-rate composer sent a score of his to Beethoven, with "Finis: by the help of God" written on the last page, the great man returned it with the pencilled addition, "O man, help thyself."

Individuality Counts.

The second difficulty is more especially concerned with the interpreters of music: If a performer or a conductor is to refer his work to established standards, what scope has he for the reasonable exercise of his own individuality? Of course this also concerns the composer, in his early days anyhow. And we may reflect in passing that if Bach was influenced by Buxtehude and the other established organ-composers of his youth, if Beethoven learnt much in the way of architectural build and key-schemes from the works of Haydn and Mozart, if Elgar began his job by ruling out, bar by bar, the score of a Mozart overture and then trying to write one like it, no young composer need be ashamed to follow them. However, for our present purpose we shall confine ourselves to the interpreter—performer or conductor. Now, it is quite possible that such an interpreter may exclaim, in a moment of ecstatic inspiration, "All men are liars but myself: to Brahms it was given to create this work, and to me alone it is given, by divine grace, to re-create it." In other words, everybody in the regiment is out of step save mamma's Johnny. And that, indeed, is possible: let us not be too cocksure that it isn't possible. Homer nodded, and so may all the Beechams and Hartys betimes. Anyhow, be it far from us to demand of any interpreter, obscure or distinguished, that his interpretation shall be nothing more than the copy of a pattern, or that it shall be even the common measure of several patterns. Heaven forbid. I have always kept before me the advice, given to me thirty odd years ago, by my old friend and teacher, Dr. Alexander Irwin: "Never be content to be the gramophone record of anybody's opinions."

Need of Standards.

But standards there must be; and the standards must be studied and studied, and studied again, patiently and devotedly. When the greatest Interpreter turned aside, exclaiming "I must be about My Father's business," it was only when He knew the time was ripe, and after He had spent years sitting at the feet of the Rabbis. It is not given to any one of us, great or little, ever to determine, with divine surety, that the time is ripe to stand alone. Of myself, as a humble, struggling but devoted maker of music, I can confess in all sincerity that the longer I live the more I find there is to learn; and I pray that the day will never come when I shall declare that I know all the truth. We can only do our best; but to anyone, great man or little man, who may read these words, I suggest, with all respect, that he is putting a heavy premium on his own abilities if he dare to stand before he has ever knelt.

In my review of the playing of Mozart by the Hungarian Quartet recently, I remarked, when comparing their work with that of the Roth Quartet last year, that there is more than one legitimate way of interpreting a great composer; and surely that is a self-evident truth. But that is far from saying that everybody's Mozart is Mozart within the meaning of the Act. The old, solemn voice of tradition can still speak with authority; and he who would flout it is inviting the wrath of the gods. That is not to say that a new prophet, who may arise to speak the old gospel with a wondrously new inflection, is not to be listened to; for may not he be the appointed one to shed a clearer and purer radiance upon the old truths? But such a one, if he be worthy to be heard, shall first have drunk deep and long at the fount of wisdom; and when his time comes, however new his manner of phrasing, his truths shall be the old, immortal truths. Let us beware of the false prophets.

Chamber Music Club.

A few years ago there was founded, under the auspices of the British Federation of Music Festivals, the Belfast Chamber Music Club. I referred to it then; and, again, at the request of the hon. secretary, I do so very willingly. It exists for the personal (as distinct from the listening) development of chamber music, and I am happy to hear that it is flourishing. Is there, could there be anything better, socially, artistically, spiritually, than the Whole Consort or the Broken Consort of the two or three amateurs (blessed word) gathered together? The practice rooms are at Methodist College, and all information as to membership may be obtained from the hon. secretary, Miss Margaret Milligan (22 Ravenhill Gardens).

SECOND SUCCESS IN A WEEK.

ROESIDE COOK'S FEAT

IN SANDOWN STAKES A' CELTIC.

The outstanding performer at Celtic last night was Roeside Cook, only recently returned from London tracks, who registered 30.67secs. when scoring by ten lengths from Nap's Tim in the Sandown Stakes, her second success at the same venue in the course of a week.

Favourite at 11 to 10, the Limavady bitch gladdened the hearts of backers by her slick performance, for she was the first favourite to score during the meeting.

Arago held her until the pair went to the turn, and then the Lisburn dog gave it up in disgust and ultimately finished at the tail-end of his field.

Some idea of the merit of the bitch's performance can be gained from a comparison of her figures with those of the winner of the Balmoral Stakes (550).

A good class lot contested the issue here, and yet Brush Worker failed to beat 32.73secs. when scoring by a head from the unlucky Lucky Heather, who was sandwiched at the first turn and ran on gamely despite this handicap.

Tara King, back after an absence of some weeks, led for more than three-parts of the journey, but finished as if short of a gallop, Brush Worker passing him 50 yards out to score cleverly by half a length.

KEADY CHURCH MEMORIAL.

TO REV. W. G. LUNDIE, B.A.

The thirty-three years' devoted ministry of the late Rev. William G. Lundie, B.A., in 1st Keady Presbyterian Church (The Temple) has been appropriately perpetuated by the erection of a grey marble tablet, which was unveiled and dedicated on Friday evening.

The service was conducted by the pastor of the congregation, Rev. Samuel M'Gladdery, B.A., B.D., and prayer was offered by Rev. David Dowling, M.A. (Belfast). The Moderator of the General Assembly, Rt. Rev. W. J. Currie, B.A., D.D., was the preacher, and paid a striking tribute to Mr. Lundie.

The tablet was unveiled by the late minister's wife and dedicated by the Moderator.

The choir and congregation joined in singing "How bright these glorious spirits shine," Mrs. Samuel Curry presiding at the organ.

NEW ORANGE HALL IN TYRONE.

OPENING CEREMONY

BY RT. HON. J. F. GORDON.

ULSTER'S STAND AGAINST ATTACK.

A new Orange hall at Ballynakelly, near Coalisland, Co. Tyrone, was declared open this afternoon by Br. the Rt. Hon. J. F. Gordon, Minister of Labour, in the presence of a big company. The occasion wsa availed of to hold a miniature "Twelfth" in the district, and thousands of Orangemen paraded.

The new hall, which is picturesquely situated commanding a view of Lough Neagh, was erected by voluntary labour under the supervision of Br. G. Stewart, W.M., and Br. G. Burns, J.P. (chairman of the Hall Committee), of Rising Sons of Ulster L.O.L. 151, Ballynakelly.

Br. Rowley Elliott, M.P., Co. Grand Secretary, presided, and the opening religious exercises were conducted by Rev. J. A. Pollard, B.A., Coalisland; Rev. J. Cathcart, Dungannon. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Rev. Stanley W. Thompson, B.D., Dungannon, and other clergy taking part were Rev. H.E. Hardy, M.A., Killyman, and Rev. G. Scott, M.A., Benburb.

The chairman congratulated the brethren of Rising Sons of Ulster L.O.L. 157 on the magnificent hall. He hoped that the new hall would always be used in the best interests of the Order and be at all times at the disposal of those who were determined to maintain the great principles for which the Orange Order stood. It could not be too often stated that the Orange Order was their greatest bulwark. (Loud applause.)

Having referred to the recent international crisis, Mr. Elliott remarked that with disloyalty rampant in Eire, where the King's flag dare not fly, it behoved them to unite in the Premier's watchword, "Not an inch!" To all those who would cajole or force them from their British connection they said "nothing doing."

"Our Prime Minister can feel that in any stand he may think it necessary to take to protect our area he will have the full backing and support of all Border Loyalists," declared the speaker, amid cheers.

THE LABOUR MINISTER.

The Rt. Hon. J. F. Gordon, who was presented with an inscribed silver key by Br. G. Stewart, then declared the hall open. Having complimented all concerned on the events which culminated in that ceremony, Mr. Gordon went on to say that he knew the men of the North, their outlook and cherished traditions, how they valued their Imperial heritage, and their determination, come what may, to maintain their connection with Great Britain and the Empire. They were the descendants of strong and resolute men, who were imbued with the passion of faith, the love of freedom, and the dethronement of tyranny. That freedom had been purchased at a big price, and was it likely they would remain silent and indifferent while the enemy tried to rush their gates?

Every subterfuge was being adopted by the enemy to assault their position. Ulster had been assailed by open foe and false friend. Cajolery in its most insidious form, and violence in its most terrible aspect had been directed against her people, but despite all these attacks they had spurned the traitor, beaten the enemy, and stood that day as victors on the field of battle. (Loud cheers.)

NO YIELDING TO DE VALERA.

Br. William Grant, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Labour, said he was sure the Orangemen of Co. Tyrone were delighted with the firm attitude taken up by Lord Craigavon in regard to Mr. De Valera's latest move to incorporate Northern Ireland in an Irish Republic. (Cheers.) The Prime Minister had once again rendered a great service to the Province by proclaiming that there was no danger to the constitutional and territorial integrity of the area under the jurisdiction of the Northern Government.

Mr. De Valera had turned covetous eyes towards that great country, but he would have to recognise clearly that Northern Ireland had long since made its final sacrifice, and would never contemplate yielding to the claims of the Dictator of Eire.

Concluding, Mr. Grant said that that splendid gathering of Orangemen in the County of Tyrone showed that the Order was flourishing in a highly satisfactory manner.

A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Gordon for declaring the hall open, and a similar compliment was paid to the chairman.

The officers of No. 157 are:—W.M., Br. G. Stewart; D.M., Br. T. M'Kay; secretary, Br. D. Cranston; treasurer, Br. W. J. Dilworth; committee—Brs. R. Smith (foreman), N. Cardwell, G. Burns, J.P.; W. Dilworth and W. Hazelton.

The Hall Committee were—Brs. G. Burns, J.P. (chairman), R. Proctor (secretary), N. Cardwell, W. Dilworth, G. Stewart, G. Stevens, R. Smith, T. M'Kay, J. Orr, W. Hazelton, W. J. Dilworth (treasurer), and D. Cranston.

REQUEST TO BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Br. W. J. Forsythe, J.P., was unanimously re-elected Worshipful Master for the ninth successive year, and Br. Isaac Walker treasurer for the 19th successive year at the election of officers of Bangor District L.O.L. No. 18 in the Orange Hall, Bangor, on Friday evening. Br. A. J. Conway, P.M., presided, and Br. J. Halliday, WM. No. 447, occupied the deputy chair.

The other appointments were:—Deputy Master, Br. D. Montgomery; chaplains, Br. Canon Bradley and Br. Geo. Kerr; secretary, Br. W. H. M'Millan; committee—Brs. W. J. Stevenson, R. Close, W. M'Burney, J. Carters, and J. A. Davidson; County representative, Br. A. J. Conway.

The following resolution [illegible] committee endorsed:—

"That we, the members of Bangor District L.O.L. No. 18, being pledged to guard the sanctity of the Lord's Day, hereby declare that we are in entire accord with the petition presented by the local Protestant Ministers' Council with reference to Sunday entertainments requiring the Borough Council's permission, and we earnestly request the Borough Council to exercise their powers to prohibit all such entertainments."

The human element will become an increasingly important thing at Broadcasting House, I should say.

The Marchioness of Dufferin has returned to town, and gave a party in one of the smartest of the West End cafes to meet some of her friends. She looked particularly well in a black marocain frock thickly embroidered with gold sequins and gold thread.

Women golfers, of whom there are plenty in the Six Counties, may be interested in some of the styles worn this week at the tournament of the Ladies' Parliamentary Golf Association. Lady Claud Hamilton, one of the players, wore a green two-piece suit and a brown and green checked blouse tied with an artist's bow.

Made from Mackintosh.

There were only a few women wearing trousers, one player selecting a pair of green ones and another a pair made from mackintosh. The Ladies' Parliamentary Golf Association has a fairly long history, going back to the year 1911. Is is open to almost any woman who has Parliament associations—an M.P., an ex-M.P., the mother, wife, sister, daughter-in-law or the direct descendant of a member of either House during this or the last century.

There is a place for the woman who feels uncomfortable without some make-up in the newly-formed Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service. Recruiting has been brisk, one reason being perhaps that those in charge have realised that women, even when at such severely practical work as that demanded from them in the W.A.T.S., do like to feel that they are looking attractive, and that rouge and powder are assisting them to look their best.

The make-up, needless to say, must not be glaring; the varnish on one's nails must not shriek, and the lip-stick must be applied discreetly. Another point favouring the recruiting schemes is that normal-sized women may join. It was feared that only those who were of Amazonian build would be required, but in the new women's army it would seem that there is a place for everybody

LEATHER FURNITURE

White Hide for Your Drawing-room

By MADGE AMES.

ONE of the most fashionable and, of course, one of the most durable materials for chair coverings is leather.

For many years now we have seen the rich dark brown leather chair coverings which look so well in lounges, libraries, halls and so forth. And it has often been merely the fact that we like lighter or brighter colours in our own rooms that has prevented a more general use of leather chairs in our sitting-rooms or bedrooms.

But those of us who have seen the latest additions to the leather upholstered furniture are surprised at the beauty of the newest colourings as well as the suppleness of the leather itself.

Chose Pale Green.

Recently I saw a man's study which had just been re-fitted with furniture. The walls were a pale, warm, cream colour, the carpet deep green. The comfortable arm chairs, with flat surfaces everywhere, were upholstered in fine leather in a rather lighter and very pleasing shade of green. The desk chair was of light honey-coloured wood, with the seat of green leather having flat gilt studs to keep it in place.

There are lovely rich shades of red leather to be found, which are not perhaps quite so new as the blues or the green shades of leather, but which look particularly bright and cheerful in some surroundings.

I remember particularly admiring a set of greyish wood dining-room chairs which had bright red leather seats.

THEY would look most arresting in a dining-room having soft shades of grey for the hangings and walls, while the table should, of course, match the light wood of the chairs—the red seats giving the only bright colour note in the room.

Chairs covered in white hide are also very fashionable and look charming in some drawing rooms. As all-white rooms are no longer in vogue, these white leather chairs are often seen in conjunction with colourful chintz curtains and with walls papered in one of the colours of the chintz, and having plain, fitted carpets to tone.

One of the favourite schemes seems to be that of green, blue and white, while yellow and white is equally successful. There are, too, several new schemes consisting of soft, warm grey and white, sometimes used with touches of another colour such as lavender, yellow, or red.

Do not imagine, however, that white hide is necessarily extravagant in wear, for it is possible to obtain leather nowadays, which is washable and merely needs an occasional wiping over with a cloth rung out in warm water to keep it fresh and clean.

And Pastels, Too.

In the same way pastel coloured leather chairs may also be chosen in lovely shades of pale honey colour, soft lettuce green, pale turquoise blue, lavender grey and so so. Chairs upholstered in leather in these colourings are really lovely for drawing rooms or bedrooms, and these shades are also obtainable in washable hide.

The Modest Violet

ITS ARTISTIC DISPLAY

Bowl Of Fragrance.

Already violets are in season, and they are now obtainable in good quantities.

They look best when massed together rather closely, either by themselves or more often in conjunction with other flowers. Just at present they look lovely ...ngled with the multi-coloured anemones and the pretty forget-me-nots which are now obtainable. They may be put together in a wide-rimmed posy bowl or may be massed in a low vase with a frill of violet leaves.

For Single Blooms.

For long-stemmed flowers, however, there is a new type of vase.

It has a slightly globular base, which narrows to a very slender neck, with a tiny opening at the top.

Each vase holds a single lovely long-stemmed bloom, such as a rose or a lily.

There is, too, a new type of silver candlestick designed to hold a few long-stemmed flowers when not in use as a candlestick after dark.

"Touching Your Toes—Perfectly Horrible"

EVELYN LAYE REPLIES TO SOME ULSTER QUERIES

SOMEBODY has just written to me to say: "I am getting a middle-aged spread and I know I ought to do something about it, but I can't bear the thought of touching my toes twelve times before breakfast, or taking up games at my time of life. Please can you suggest anything?"

Well, I am sure there are lots of people who feel just like that and who don't do anything about it, with the result that they have lost their figures long before they actually reach middle-age. And in these enlightened days, there is really no necessity for this sort of thing.

Join a Class.

Touching your toes twelve times before breakfast is, I agree, perfectly horrible. And if you've never taken much interest in games you can't be expected suddenly to become enthusiastic over them. However, there are a number of brilliant women who in the last few years have built up splendidly organised health movements which you can join for a very nominal sum. I am sending my correspondent the address of a branch in Belfast, and I am sure that if she attends a class once a week, she will find it is quite fun and, of course, it will effect an enormous improvement in her figure.

THE great thing about such classes is that, whatever your problems, you will always find others with even more serious ones! Then you have the opportunity to benefit from special exercises which have been very carefully thought out and are designed to cure your own particular trouble—whether it be spreading hips, a bulgy waistline, dowager's hump, or anything else! Another good thing is that exercises are done to music, which makes them more amusing and gives you a sense of rhythm, which is most important. And, of course, there is no age limit for classes like this. Great grandmothers are just as welcome as schoolgirls!

For Indigestion.

I do think that to neglect one's figure is a great mistake, and not only from the point of view of appearance. Such things as indigestion and constipation are often curable only by certain exercises which stimulate the internal organs. Here is a good one:

Stand with the feet apart and the arms held above the head in a circle with the finger-tips touching. Bend the trunk to the left, then forward and down, to the right and up. Then bend forward, fling the arms out to the sides, stretch back as far as possible and clap the hands over the head. Repeat to the right.

IN addition to helping digestion, this exercise reduces the waist and tummy! Try doing it to a waltz tune, and you'll find yourself wanting to keep it up until the music ends. If your body isn't very supple to begin with, however, don't overdo it, but just gradually increase the time you spend on it until you can easily keep it up for a whole record.

How Do You Breathe?

Health experts all agree on the importance of correct breathing, and I am afraid we are inclined to forget this. Deep breathing—filling the lungs right to the top with air and letting it out through the mouth—can be done all the time. There really isn't a minute of the day when it isn't possible, and it soon becomes a habit—one of the best for general fitness!

Read Your Own Hand

DO you ever wonder why hands differ so much, why some are long and smooth-fingered, others short and square, thin and angular? The differences are not accidental. The shape of a hand tells the story of its owner. It is fascinating and often extremely helpful to read character and capabilities from the shape of hands.

Marianne Raynor has spent many years studying the hands of hundreds of people, classifying them, analysing their characteristics. She is contributing a series of twelve illustrated articles on hand reading to the Woman's Page. Look out for

FRENCH LABOUR IS BLAMED.

YUGO-SLAV DESTROYERS.

CONTRACT GOES TO GERMANY.

It is reported that the Yugo-Slav Government is shortly to order eight big destroyers in Germany (states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post") and the value of this contract would be about £2,600,000.

This will be a severe blow to French shipbuilding interests, which had confidently reckoned on obtaining all future Yugo-Slav naval contracts.

A large amount of French capital is invested in the recently-constructed dockyard at Split, where two destroyers are being built to French design.

The loss of the new order for eight destroyers is attributed by French authorities in large measure to the delay in delivering previous vessels, this delay being due to the 40-hour week. At the present time all new French naval construction is seriously in arrears.

SATURDAY COMMENTARY BY LADY OXFORD AND ASQUITH

The Men Who Make Wars

IT is impossible to write, or even to think, of anything in the aftermath of all the anguish which men and women have gone through in these last weeks, except the present situation in Europe: the orgy of waste, fear, folly, and lack of wisdom, which I have seen even in these islands, convinces me that no amount of trenches dug, shelters, sand, guns, arms, tanks, or aeroplanes will prevent a future war.

Wars, alas, are not made by soldiers, sailors, airmen, or men in the street; they are made by the men at the head of the nations they govern, and if these men train their people by perpetual propaganda of the vilest kind to hate and suspect all who talk of peace, and keep their followers in complete ignorance of what is true, chaos will continue.

I cannot write of what the state of mind of people in other countries is, or has been. I can only write of what I have witnessed, read, and heard in my own.

I am told that in France the people have shown admirable calm, and have gone about their daily duties with dignity. As I do not read French newspapers, or foreign speeches, I cannot judge what they have said or written, but over here they have been lamentable.

Platitudinous phrases such as: "We shall rue the day when his Majesty's Government sold the pass of freedom," "Abject submission to the foreign bullies," "Betraying the cause of freedom and of justice," and, perhaps sillier still, "mass-hysteria"—after the Prime Minister had aroused the greatest possible enthusiasm by announcing in a quiet speech delivered in the House of Commons that he was about to make one last effort in his policy of peace by going back to Germany—have filled me with nausea and incidentally had a disastrous effect on American opinion.

Propaganda of Dictators

I DO not suppose sensible people think the United States will be willing to send 2,000,000 soldiers across the sea to help us again, but we value their moral backing, and I was sad when I read in a paper which supports the President: "Now that Prime Minister Chamberlain has averted a European war, at least for the time-being, various British Liberals appear to be enraged because peace has broken out in Europe."

But it will be said that the speeches and phrases which I complain of are not half as violent as those spoken and published in Germany and Italy. This is true, but we have become acclimatised to the propaganda of dictators, and it would be wiser to take no notice of it. Dictators live by propaganda, not only in their Press, but by their whole conception of Government.

Neither Herr Hitler nor Signor Mussolini ever address an audience of less than half a million people; they never travel except in armoured cars or special trains full of detectives and secret police. They spend endless sums of money on street decorations, banners, flags, uniforms, and processions; there are statues of Herr Hitler every hundred yards in Germany.

This is to please her people, and doubtless it pleases them. Over here such exhibitionism leaves us cold.

Too Many Statues

WE have enough, if not too many, statues of our statesmen, and could do well if some of our war memorials disappeared, as they are of little artistic merit, and impede the traffic. Money spent on this sort of propaganda is incomprehensible to people in these islands.

The propaganda which I object to is of a different order. The foundation of our prosperity and of our influence in world politics, has been our Liberalism, and it is the propaganda against my notion of Liberalism to which I take objection.

In my youth the Conservatives were called "Jingoes"—no one was surprised that they thought war glorious, and peace ignominious and that it was a sign of decadence in nations if their men abhorred war—but what do we see to-day?

A handful of Tories rebelling from the Prime Minister followed by all the leading Liberals. I do not think that there is a single Liberal newspaper published to-day which has a good word to say for Mr. Neville Chamberlain.

Since writing this, I read a newspaper report: "The Marquis of Crewe recently signed a letter with Viscount Samuel and Mr. Alfred Spender dissociating themselves from current criticisms of the Prime Minister."

"No amount of guns, tanks, or aeroplanes will prevent a future war," says Lady Oxford. Here is shown a British Army gun crew moving a big gun into position —a task calling for much man power.

If this is true (which I well believe, as they are men of judgment and experience) and their supporters will follow them, I shall feel perfect confidence in a revival of Liberalism.

What is the grievance which the modern Liberals have against a policy of peace? Is it that the Prime Minister did not get better terms in his visits to Herr Hitler or is it because they persist in thinking that we could have prevented Germany from seizing Czecho-Slovakia. Let us be honest, and confess that neither the French nor the English could have done this.

I had tea with a distinguished City man a few days ago, who had flown over to Czecho-Slovakia to inquire how best the Lord Mayor's Fund could be distributed.

He saw all the leading Czechs, and they told him that the Germans were prepared on the Sunday before the Prime Minister's visit on Thursday, September 15, to take their country like they took Austria. The Czechs would have put up a grand fight, and massacred many Germans and themselves, but in the end they would have been defeated, and, though terribly unhappy and poverty-stricken, they preferred anything to war.

Easy to Criticise

THIS is only one man's opinion, but he is a man of sympathy, and well worth listening to. I have yet to learn what a leader of the Liberals would have done in the Prime Minister's place. It is easy for those who have no responsibility to criticise, but I cannot imagine a more difficult decision than that with which Mr. Chamberlain was confronted, and I am told, with what truth I do not know, that he is highly respected in foreign countries.

You had only to read the extraordinary enthusiasm with which he was greeted every time he went to Germany to realise that the people thought his purpose was to promote peace.

This enthusiasm was not for Mr. Chamberlain—he was not a popular hero who had made striking speeches which had moved millions, not at all: a man less likely to arouse "mass-hysteria" never lived. They can only have known him by the clever, cruel caricatures in Britain—if even that, as I am told, no English newspapers can be bought in Germany.

Cheers—Not Jeers

HE was just an ordinary man, who had come to them to try and make reparations for all that they had suffered after the war. Their cheers were not jeers at a coward, who had come to them to beg forgiveness for the revengful Treaty of Versailles; they were cheers for a man, neither very young nor very strong, but a man who, before making a promise to save the Czechs (which he knew to be impossible) asked Herr Hitler to hold his hand.

Those who are in disagreement with me will say that the peace is not permanent, that Germany will get stronger every day, and that we will get weaker. Why we should get weaker I do not know, unless more members of his Cabinet desert, and the Prime Minister will feel incapable of carrying on.

This I refuse to believe, as if there is one thing more certain than another, it is that in times of crises all personal prejudices in Britain melt like snow in sun, that those who hate Dictators more than they love peace will join up, and that political team-work, which has always been our pride, will pull us through to-day as it has pulled us through in the past.

FORGOT IT WAS PAY NIGHT.

GLASGOW BOY STRIKERS.

LONG WAIT IN THE RAIN.

Two hundred platers' boys, who downed tools on a wage grievance at Clydebank shipyard yesterday, walked out so quickly that they forgot it was pay night. So they had to seek shelter from the rain for several hours until the gates were opened again.

Just before this strike action the gates had been opened to admit the 100 rivet boys whose two-day charcoal strike was over.

The latest batch of boy strikers formed part of squads engaged on Admiralty work throughout the entire yard, whereas the rivet boys' defection was confined to the west section of the yard.

THE AGRICULTURAL RELIEF SCHEMES.

CRITICISM IN COOKSTOWN.

APPEAL TO FINANCE MINISTER.

The recent announcement by the Minister of Agriculture relative to agricultural relief schemes was discussed at the quarterly meeting of Cookstown Local Employment Committee on Friday evening, Mr. H. L. Glasgow, chairman, presiding.

The Chairman quoted from the Minister's statement in the Northern House when he referred to the schemes, and made it clear that the scheme was available only to landowners who had no other source of income. Farmers who had any other income were not eligible.

The Chairman added that it seemed as if Sir Basil Brooke did not understand the position. The scheme was not meant to be a pecuniary benefit to farmers but to be a relief of unemployment.

It was agreed that the committee send a personal appeal to the Minister of Finance, Rt. Hon. J. M. Andrews (to whom as Minister of Labour the Cookstown Committee first suggested agricultural relief schemes) to have this artificial restriction removed.

The resolution expressed regret that the Minister of Agriculture had decided to reduce the grant on holdings of a high valuation and also to the holdings of those whose main source of income was farming.

It was pointed out that agricultural relief schemes were of no pecuniary benefit to farmers who had to provide all the material and portion of the wages, and it was obvious that if the owner of land had other sources of income he was in a better position to undertake improvement work.

ULSTER WEDDING ON RAND.

OF METHODIST COLLEGE INTEREST.

The marriage has taken place in Johannesburg, South Africa, of Dr. Hugh Flack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Flack, of Coagh, County Tyrone. His bride is Miss Muriel Elizabeth Hickman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Davis Hickman, of Johannesburg.

Dr. Flack, who is senior medical officer of health at Doom-Dooma, Assam, India, was educated at Methodist College, Belfast, where he played in the first XV. in 1920-21, and graduated at Queen's University.

At the wedding the best man was his brother, Mr. E. Flack, and among those present was Mr. W. R. Rangecroft, Johannesburg, another former pupil of Methodist College, who is a son of Mr. James Rangecroft, of Belfast.

WORK OF URGENCY.

IN view of the present condition of international affairs, there is not a little anxiety felt throughout the country as to the progress of the rearmament scheme. There has been an uneasy feeling that unnecessary delays have occurred, especially in connection with the construction of aircraft at a time when we may at short notice be called upon to defend our cities against aerial attacks. At the annual dinner of the Institution of Production Engineers, held in London on Friday evening, Sir Kingsley Wood, the Air Minister, whose recent visit to Belfast will be recalled, gave an assurance which will go far to allay the misgivings felt in some quarters. He said that the aircraft industry was at the present time engaged in unparalleled efforts and was working to full capacity. The Air Ministry was also extending very considerably the use of sub-contracting. They were broadening the basis of aircraft production by making use of the services of the technical staffs and experienced engineers of organisations outside the aircraft industry. They wanted to devise new and improved methods in aircraft production. Lord Nuffield, who presided on the occasion, said that Sir Kingsley Wood's speech had been most encouraging from his point of view, but he wished that that encouragement had been given three years ago. If so, the position would have been very different from what it was during the great crisis a few weeks since. Sir Kingsley Wood, he said, had "broken down a lot of red tape to allow people who knew their job to get on with it," and if this went on for a reasonable time the country would get all it needed in the air.

Sir Kingsley Wood observed, incidentally, that "labour forces were being increased and more labour would be required." With some 1,800,000 people unemployed in Britain to-day, it is evident that there is a vast reservoir of labour available, and it seems strange to the average citizen that the number of workless should have grown considerably in the last few months in view of the present position, as described by the Air Minister. Mr. Hore-Belisha, Minister for War, speaking at Cardiff on Friday evening, also dwelt on the need of an acceleration of the armaments programme. He said the war-time method under which every other consideration was subordinated to the carrying out of the programme must be revived. The Ministry of Munitions must have full power to allot orders, to control the supply of materials, and make arrangements for the diversion of skilled labour. We expect that the Government as a whole will stand firmly behind the Ministers responsible in the endeavour to make good these promises. "Red tape," as Lord Nuffield said, should not be allowed to impede the carrying out of defence plans on which the very existence of the country depends. If the Czecho-Slovak crisis has, as it seems, had the effect of bringing home to the British people and to the Government the necessity for leaving no stone unturned to provide for the nation's protection in the event of war, it will have had at least one beneficial result.

GOSSIP OF LONDON.

VISIT OF KING CAROL.

EVENT OF MUCH IMPORTANCE.

LONDON, Saturday.

Considerable diplomatic importance is attached to the State visit to London which it was announced last night King Carol is to pay from November 15 to 18. If the visit succeeds in bringing about a closer rapprochement between Roumania and this country, it is not unlikely that the fact will be commemorated by raising the status of the Roumanian Legation in London and the British Legation in Bukharest to Embassies. Should this be done King Carol, I am told, intends to appoint as his first Ambassador here a Roumanian statesman of the front rank and not a professional diplomat.—("Peterborough" in the "Daily Telegraph").

NO RECEPTION.

So there is to be no reception at Londonderry House on the eve of the opening of Parliament. I am not altogether surprised in view of the heavy duties of the Prime Minister and the many business engagements of the Cabinet, and without the presence of Neville Chamberlain and the ministers the reception would lose most of its point. In 1935 Lady Londonderry did not hold a reception in view of an almost similar situation.. Preparations for this year's reception had all been made, a few days ago they were abandoned. However, the eve of Parliament dinner at Downing Street will be held as usual. The proposer and seconder of the King's speech in the House are always guests.—(Noel Thompson in the "Daily Sketch.")

NEVER TOO LATE.

After 50 years a printer's error has been detected in the annual report of the trustees of the National Gallery, but it has taken a few thousand years for modern thought to discover a curious blunder in the Ten Commandments. The original printer stuck a "not" in practically everywhere.—(Timothy Shy in the "News Chronicle.")

A view of the Government Buildings at Pretoria, capital of the South African Union.

When 10,000 People Marched Into a Wilderness

South Africa is preparing to celebrate the centenary of one of the most remarkable episodes in history, recalled in this article by John England

SOUTH AFRICA is preparing to celebrate the centenary of the Great Trek, one of the most remarkable events in its history—indeed, one of the epic events of the history of the world.

One hundred years ago the Voortrekkers of Cape Colony determined to cut themselves off from British rule and establish new homes in virgin territory lying to the north. In the period of about three years almost 10,000 people set out for the wilderness, taking with them their children, their cattle and their flocks—an exodus like that of the Children of Israel.

At the present time two ox waggons, identical with those used by the trekkers, are travelling over exactly the same route, known as the "Path of South Africa," and on December 16 the celebrations will reach their climax when the cornerstone of the Voortrekker Monument will be laid at Pretoria, and the defeat of the Zulu king, Dingaan, will be commemorated at the Blood River.

The parties all set off from Cape Colony, and first of all entered the Free State, where they dispersed in several directions. Some remained on the Free State plateau, but others pushed on over the Vaal River, and another contingent crossed the Drakenberg range into Natal. A good many of the last-named returned into the Free State and the Transvaal a few years later when Natal was annexed by Britain.

The leaders of the Voortrekkers numbered among them Louis Trigardt, Andries Pretorius (conquerer of Dingaan), A. Potgieter, and Piet Retief. All of them were of the same type as Kruger, the inveterate enemy of Britain later, who accompanied the trekkers as a lad.

THESE Boers had little education. Their literature was almost confined to the Bible, and the Old Testament was preferred to the New. On the other hand they were courageous, determined and magnificent stock.

They needed all their courage and determination when they entered the wild country north of Cape Colony. At the time it was almost unknown and had been entered by only a few white hunters and missionaries.

A century ago Chaka, the chief of the Zulus, commanded the most formidable fighting force in South Africa, and he held Zululand and most of Natal. Mosilikatze, one of the rebellious generals, head of the Matabele, had overrun huge stretches of country. The third power was the Basutos, under their great chief Moshesh.

The pioneer Voortrekkers were under the leadership of Trigardt, who blazed the trail into the Northern Transvaal. One of his grandsons is taking part in the present commemorative trek, and Mr. Claude Fuller, as the outcome of ten years work, was able to plot the exact route taken by the pioneers.

TRIGARDT'S party reached the Zoutpanberg, and eventually made their way to Lourenco Marques. They could only travel four or five miles a day, because the calves and lambs were not able to cover more than that distance. Along the route the party suffered many privations, and many perished in the malarial country. The trek took three years in all.

The next band of settlers to leave Cape Colony were under the leadership of Andries Potgieter. Like Trigardt, they first made for the Zoutpanberg in the Northern Transvaal, but afterwards decided to return to the Free State where the country appeared more suitable for settlement.

Unfortunately it had suffered greatly during the previous decade as the consequence of the depredations of the Matabele under Mosilikatze. The country was devastated, and the ruins of once populous villages were scattered everywhere. Moreover, the Matabele attacked the Boer parties without mercy, and women and children were murdered.

A campaign against their chief was imperative, and at Mosega, where his army was surprised, defeat was inflicted upon him, the Boers having the advantage of firearms. They followed up their success, and less than a year later Mosilikatze was finally crushed and fled north. In honour of the event the town of Winburg was established, and a Government set up.

But Potgieter and Retief decided they would push on into Natal, where Chaka had been succeeded by Dingaan, if anything even more bloodthirsty. Retief boldly approached the chief with the object of obtaining formal cession of part of the country to the immigrants.

THE Zulu chief stated that he would do this if the Boers would first assist him in the recovery of some stolen cattle. Retief agreed to this proviso, and the animals were brought back, and an agreement was drawn up.

Unhappily, the Boers had not reckoned with the treachery of the Zulu leader, for only two days later he ordered his warriors to wipe out the entire party, and afterwards to attack every Boer family which had entered his country. Retief's party was massacred, and in less than a week 600 men, women and children fell beneath the Zulu assegais.

Their savagery spread such fear that even on the coast, where the British were settled, terror prevailed, and a large number returned to Cape Colony. Potgieter himself narrowly escaped death when he and his men were ambushed.

RELIEF came with the appointment of Andries Pretorius, who had just entered the country, as Commandant-General. He gathered a force of 500, all imbued with the determination to avenge their comrades, and challenged Dingaan. On December 16 the Zulus attacked the Boers at the Blood River with 10,000 warriors, but they were beaten off.

No fewer than 3,000 Zulus fell, the Boers losing only a dozen. "Dingaan's Day has been annually celebrated ever since, and the town of Pretoria was afterwards named in honour of the victor. A few years later, when Britain formally annexed Natal almost all the Boers crossed back into the Free State or the Transvaal.

FREQUENT dissensions arose among the settlers in the Free State, and as the outcome some of the Boers moved north into the Transvaal, which became the home of those most irreconcilably opposed to British rule. Among these was the father of Paul Kruger, Caspar Jan Kruger, helping to found the Transvaal.

Even in the new State quarrels were not infrequent, and Potgieter with a large number of Boers travelled even further north in the direction of Delagoa Bay, where he made a treaty with the Portuguese. He and the other noted leader, Andries Pretorius, were estranged for some time, but towards the end of their careers were reconciled.

The Centenary celebrations this year will recall to millions the extraordinary courage of the pioneers in Africa, and in these days when Boer and Englishman live and work happily together, will show the world that even apparently irreconcilables can bury their quarrels in face of mutual esteem.

—Word or Sword— The Choice Before the World

Thoughts for the Times

By

Dr. A. D. Belden

THERE have been few finer things done recently than Mr. Winston Churchill's broadcast to America, in which he replied to Hitler's comments upon British politicians.

Hitler could scarcely have made a worse choice for a duel of words than Mr. Churchill, and there was no passage of the broadcast speech more scathing in its truth-dealing satire than what he had to say about words.

Here is the passage, which, I think, will endure for a very long time in human memory:—

> "You see these dictators on their pedestals, surrounded by the bayonets of their soldiers and the truncheons of their police.
> "On all sides they are guarded by masses of armed men, cannons, aeroplanes, fortifications and the like—they boast and vaunt themselves before the world, yet in their hearts there is unspoken fear. They are afraid of words and thoughts; words spoken abroad, thoughts stirring at home—all the more powerful because forbidden—terrify them.
> "A little mouse of thought appears in the room, and even the mightiest potentates are thrown into a panic. They make frantic efforts to bar out thoughts and words; they are afraid of the workings of the human mind."

::: :::

That "little mouse of thought" will gnaw its way successfully through the net in which the lion of democracy is caught by the Fascist hunter. Well done, Mr. Churchill! You have reminded us that in spite of the ridicule that is often heaped upon democracy for its talkativeness there is a power in words, especially the right words.

As the Book of Proverbs says, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in baskets of silver." It was E. G. Bulwer-Lytton in his poem "Richlieu" who coined a phrase which will stand for all time, as itself a word testifying to the power of words, "The pen is mightier than the sword." The full quotation is worth recalling—

"Beneath the rule of men
The pen is mightier than the

Man is the only creature that speaks, although in one or two creatures like the parrot, there is an approximation to the capacity. Certainly all creatures must have some power of intercommunication, but so far as we can judge it seems never to rise much higher than a combination of instinct and gesture.

The fact than man can clothe his thought in language has been of infinite value in his evolution, and the capacity to store up knowledge in written words has enabled succeeding generations to build a higher edifice of truth upon the findings of previous generations.

The power of the orator, as is illustrated by Hitler himself, is still a force to be reckoned with in the modern world, and the effect in history of great ideas wrapped in a small compass of words has been incalculable.

Think, for example, of the phrase "No taxation without representation" which has played such a large part in promoting the constitution of our country. People are swayed much more than they realise consciously by the tabloid wisdom of the ages embalmed in proverbs.

"Look before you leap" has arrested many an impetuous action, and "take care of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves" has started many a flourishing banking account. Words are the current coin of Reason, and ultimately man must be swayed by reason if he is to escape the brutishness of the jungle and become finally civilized.

The struggle of the modern world is a struggle of ideas which gain their vogue by expressing themselves in words. Think of what the word Marx stands for to-day, because so many years ago a man wrote two books full of words. And then think of those other words uttered by Him who was Himself called the Word—the teaching of Jesus—which two thousand years afterwards are still teasing and tormenting the minds of men.

What a little distance it is linguistically between the Sword and the Word. Yet that is the choice, fateful and portentous, before the whole world of our time: the one a thing of steel, the other a thing of breath. Yet who can doubt that in the end the Word will prevail.

The Man To Whom Belfast's First Statue Was Erected

IN a recent general knowledge test the question was asked: "Who is the Earl of Belfast?" There was no reply given, for there is none. The last Earl of Belfast died unmarried. His body lies in the beautiful Chapel of the Resurrection beneath the shadow of Cave Hill.

Although Frederick Richard Earl of Belfast, died at the early age of 29, he made his mark on the minds of the Belfast people. So highly did they think of him that he was given a unique honour. He was the subject of Belfast's first statue. This was unveiled in November, 1855, and stood opposite the Academical Institution where the statue of Dr. Cooke is placed.

IN his boyhood he lived with his parents, the Marquis and Marchioness of Donegall at Malone, and sometimes in their family seat in Ormeau Park.

As he grew up it soon became evident he was of a literary turn of mind. He was a tremendous reader and was familiar with every important book published. At about the age of 21 he wrote a novel called "Two Generations," which, unfortunately, is to-day quite forgotten. A copy of this book may be seen in the Belfast Public Libraries' "local collection."

He constantly mixed with the bookish circles of Belfast. His opinions of poets and poetry were given great respect, and he gave a series of lectures on "The Poets and Poetry of the Nineteenth Century" in the Old Music Hall in May Street. The proceeds were all to help a local charity, the Working Classes' Association.

Not only was the young Earl of Belfast literary, he was also a musician and a composer. For one of his compositions, a symphony for full orchestra, he received the sum of £100. This money was again given to charity for the relief of the victims of the Irish Famine.

IN 1853 he went on a voyage to Italy. Unhappily, while at Nice he fell and broke his collar bone. The Italian doctor ordered him to bed and told him to stay there. But he refused as he had an important appointment in Naples. In two days he was dead.

Belfast's famous sculptor, Patrick M'Dowell, was asked to do a statue of him in bronze. The statue was a brilliant success and was erected at College Square East. Many still think it is Belfast's most beautiful statue.

HOWEVER, times changed, and the statue was removed, that of Dr. Cooke taking its place. It went to the Old Town Hall in Victoria Street where it remained for the most part unnoticed and forgotten.

Then when the Public Library was opened in 1888, the statue was again removed to the Reference Department. Older readers will recall how dignified and graceful it looked. It was destined to remain there for sixteen years. When the City Hall was opened it was put at the head of the grand staircase where it may be seen any day. Few statues in the world can boast of having four sites.

Now as we have seen, the Earl of Belfast was a highly cultured young man. He was a writer, a composer, and a lecturer, and successful in each subject.

But he had another unusual accomplishment and this was whistling. On his last voyage to Italy he wrote to his mother at Malone:—"I sat on the deck and made the shore echo back the lovely airs of Ireland which I whistled loudly everywhere I went. For I was always thinking of Belfast, and of Malone, and of the many peaceful hours spent under its roof."

THERE are but a few recollections of the Earl of Belfast, who died so young and so tragically. And they were awakened in my mind because of a question recently heard.

I knew very few modern readers could have answered the question "Who was the Earl of Belfast" with any confidence. Well, they know now who he was and a little more about one of the best citizens we ever had.

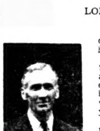
London Day By Day

Football Banquet Plans.

Catering for 500 Guests.

LONDON, Saturday.



Mr. F. W. OGILVIE.

MR. F. W. Ogilvie, the new chief of the B.B.C., has, I hear, accepted an invitation to attend the 75th anniversary banquet of the Football Association, to which I referred yesterday.

Elaborate arrangements have been made for the banquet, which will follow the International at Highbury between England and the Rest of Europe.

There will be nearly 500 guests, who will include more than thirty famous International footballers of the past. Grimsdell, the ex-'Spurs star, will be present, together with F. N. S. Creek, B. H. Baker, and F. H. Ewer, of the Corinthians in their palmiest days; the Rev. K. R. G. Hunt, formerly of the Wolves, now a sports master at Highgate School; Kail, of Dulwich Hamlet, and many others whose names will be familiar to all keen followers of the game.

There are several (such as Patsy Hendren and Andy Ducat), who became equally famous in the world of cricket. Among the "lay" guests, in addition to Mr. Ogilvie, will be Sir Fredk. Wall, late secretary of the F.A.; Lord Aberdare, Sir Noel Curtis-Bennett, Mr. Justice Charles, Sir George Broadbridge, a former Lord Mayor of London; Lord Burghley, the athlete, and E. R. T. Holmes, representing M.C.C.

Acceptances have also arrived from associations all over Europe, from the Dominions, the Channel Islands, Scotland, Wales, Eire, and even the Isle of Man.

The F.A. have every reason for doing the thing in such style. Fifty years ago there were hardly a thousand clubs in England. To-day the F.A. Controls 30,000 clubs, embracing 5,000 professional players and 750,000 amateurs.

"Hiking Bishop" Goes by Boat.

THAT much-travelled cleric the Bishop of Winchester is leaving England to-day in the liner Strathaird for India, and is not expected to return until next February.

Travelling is no new occupation for Dr. Garbett, but most of his previous journeys have been made on foot and have been largely confined to the area of his diocese.

At the age of 63 he is still a worthy holder of the title which has often been conferred on him of "The Hiking Bishop."

He was appointed Bishop of Southwark in 1919, and went to Winchester in 1932. Since then he has made frequent tours on foot in his diocese, which is eminently suited to the practice. Some of them were hikes which any man would be proud of.

In 1935 he covered seventy miles in a few days, and he has often taken as long as a week over these tours, staying at private houses on his route and calling on sick parishioners.

He usually carries a pastoral staff, and he and his chaplain, who generally accompanies him, have knapsacks on their backs.

Dr. Garbett is very outspoken on many controversial subjects. He once admitted that he had been to dog races, but added that after the first race he found the whole thing infinitely boring.

Dairy Workers' Triumph.

WHILE antagonisms survive in regard to the relations between the Milk Marketing Board and milk producers a small domestic revolution in the milk industry itself is passing unnoticed.

Improvements which have been brought about in the wages and conditions of dairymen in London show the advantage that comes from joint organisation within the trade itself.

In their way they represent a notable triumph both of the men's organisation and the leading dairy firms in London. The introduction of machinery has totally altered the character of the industry.

Long before reform was thought of dairymen in London and the provinces worked under almost intolerable conditions; their wages barely kept body and soul together. To-day not merely have they secured considerably better wages, but they have obtained in London a two weeks' holiday with pay and a six-day working week.

The last concession which has come to them was long regarded by the men themselves as impracticable. The one round on Sunday means that roundsmen instead of arriving home in the afternoon, as in the older days, are now home before the average Londoner has had breakfast.

To-day's Quotation

SIR EDWARD GERMAN chooses:

A tale out of season is as musick in mourning.

ECCLESIASTICUS.

Memories of Old London.

LONDON'S oldest buildings are disappearing one by one to make way for modern development, but it is always with a tinge of regret that the true Londoner sees them go.

That is why the Exhibition of Prints and Pictures of Old London, which opens at the Parker Galleries, in Albermarle Street, on Tuesday is bound to arouse a great deal of interest.

A host of exhibits of historic importance has been gathered together, some of them famous, others little known and almost in the nature of "finds." There is, for example, an original coloured drawing by W. Railton of his design for the Nelson Monument, in Trafalgar Square, which was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1846.

Another fascinating study is of the Tower of London, painted in 1830, and showing the moat in the foreground filled with water. There is a picture of old Westminster Palace painted on the day after the fire of 1834. The palace is depicted as a smouldering ruin, and in the foreground can be seen boats on the river full of sightseers.

In addition to these and many others there are about 500 prints, embracing all the oldest districts in London, such as Westminster, the City, Whitehall, and, further out, Islington Houndsditch, Hammersmith, Chelsea, Lambeth (without the walk!), Paddington, Southwark, Wandsworth, and Woolwich.

Top Rung.

FEW men have a knowledge of national and international finance equal to that of Sir Walter Layton, and he is such a prolific worker that his resignation from the editorship of "The Economist" has come as a surprise to many.

Sir Walter, however, finds it advisable in the face of ever-increasing responsibilities to curtail some of his old-established activities, although his services as a director will still be available to the paper.

Probably the most important work Sir Walter ever undertook was the financial assessorship on the Simon Commission on India. The offer was made to him by the Commission in the course of its tour, and Sir Walter almost immediately sailed to join the Commission at Calcutta.

He is also famed for his representation of the Ministry of Munitions on the Balfour Mission to Russia in 1917, and he was, too, with the Balfour Mission to the United States.

A Martyr to Rheumatism.

LORD Justice Greer has kept up his fight against ill-health to a good old age, though there have been times when even his warmest admirers doubted his ability to do so.

For a great many years he has been a martyr to rheumatism, and on the judgment seat itself I have seen him taking the medicines that were necessary to keep it in check.

But, though his health in recent years has not been good, there has never yet been anyone who has felt anything but admiration for the keenness of his mind. Oddly enough, it was the first Lord Birkenhead who first gave him his opening in London.

As well as anything I remember the day on which Sir Frederick Smith (as he then was) came into court, and announced that he had asked Mr. Greer, K.C., to take over his brief.

Until that time Mr. Greer was hardly known in London. Immediately after it everyone was running after him with briefs, and his rise was never in doubt.

But he will be remembered best as the President of the Second Court of Appeal, whose speech was often interrupted by a slight cough, who spoke slowly and in a markedly Scottish accent, but whose judgments were marvels of clarity and common sense.

Sandbags in Whitehall.

IF you had wandered into the Foreign Office quadrangle yesterday you might have been surprised to notice that men were still filling sandbags.

It is about a fortnight since there was need of them, and I imagine that if the need had persisted the job would have been finished long ago.

The curious thing about what is happening is that while one set of men has been taking sandbags away from the windows of Government buildings and tilting them into cellars another has been just as busily engaged in filling more of the unwanted bags.

The explanation is that the quadrangle was filled with a great mound of sand, and though this may not be needed now it may be in the future. Consequently the men have been allowed to carry out their work though at a more leisurely rate than that which preceded the Munich agreement.

Paris, 1685.

The king of France, Louis XIV, has revoked the Edict of Nantes which was issued by Henri IV in 1598, and had given freedom to the Protestants. The revocation means the end of this freedom and it is estimated that some 50,000 families, Huguenots and others, will be driven from France.

BACK TO WESTMINSTER

BUSY DAYS AHEAD.

SESSION THAT WILL MAKE HISTORY.

GERMAN COLONIES CLAIM.

CONTROVERSIES IN A NUTSHELL.

([illegible] Lobby Correspondent.)

[illegible] attention will be focussed on Westminster when Parliament re-[illegible] and history will be made before the session ends. Never before, [illegible] have so many matters of urgent [illegible] not only to this country but to [illegible], been awaiting debate and [illegible]

[illegible] magnitude may affect Empire [illegible] destinies. That is why the [illegible] be watching the reactions of [illegible] Commons.

[illegible] on November 1, and a week [illegible] King will open what will almost [illegible] be the last session of the present Parliament. Long sittings and late [illegible] in store.

Overshadowing everything are the [illegible] of Foreign Affairs. Sharply [illegible] differences of opinion are already [illegible]. They range themselves in two opposed camps. Critics of the Prime Minister's policy talk of the [illegible] of Czecho-Slovakia, protest at [illegible] they consider as a weak British [illegible] to Herr Hitler, predict further [illegible] in the near future through [illegible] aggressiveness, and see in the [illegible] between Germany, Italy [illegible] sinister possibilities of alliance [illegible] eventually may threaten the [illegible] at all points.

[illegible] of Mr. Chamberlain think [illegible] to forget much too easily the work for peace which the Prime Minister with Herr Hitler, M. Daladier and Signor Mussolini accomplished at [illegible]. That was the beginning, not the end, of the Premier's plans for [illegible]ment. In Mr. Chamberlain's [illegible] they have only laid the foundations of peace. The superstructure is not even begun. In the year [illegible] that superstructure of peace may [illegible] much more solidly on the horizon.

HOSTILITY SWEPT AWAY.

Step by step confidence may be won back and hostility between nations swept away until the day comes for which Mr. Chamberlain has said he is working:—

"The day when nations feel that they can safely discard their weapons."

Towards that goal, it is argued, Germany has shown a will to peace, as has [illegible], while Mr. Chamberlain's courageous work in averting war has saved not only Europe from catastrophe, but Czecho-Slovakia itself from annihiliation as a common battleground.

Those are the points of view that will be argued in the House and on political platforms. The country will have an early opportunity of showing what side has popular sympathy in the impending by-elections, in the Fylde Division of Lancashire, Oxford City, Dartford, Doncaster, Walsall, Bridgwater and West Lewisham.

Another question, some think it is the crux of the whole future of Europe, is Germany's desire for colonies. Again there are two irreconcilable opinions. Many believe that Germany has a moral right to the return of colonies which are essential to an expanding nation, others oppose return on several grounds, one of which is that possession of certain areas by Germany might endanger strategically our own neighbouring colonies. Plebiscites have even been suggested for Tanganyika, South West Africa and other places, and much local feeling has already been aroused.

There are those who fear that colonies might cause war in Europe, but although in his talks with Mr. Chamberlain Herr Hitler agreed that the colonies question was an "awkward" one, he also said it was not a matter for war and that "There will be no mobilisation about that."

OUR NATIONAL DEFENCES.

Associated with these questions is the problem of the effectiveness of our national defences. Some have serious misgivings, and Ministers for many months will be bombarded at question time with queries as to how the A.R.P. organisation, evacuation plans, anti-aircraft units, and other factors functioned when the crisis came. An explanation will also be sought for the sudden increase in the cost of sandbags and other materials required in the emergency.

New defence measures, on a voluntary basis, are likely to be put in hand quickly, and the magnitude of the national effort will no doubt be reflected in the next Budget, which may be well over the £1,000,000,000 total.

Attention will be drawn in the House to Mr. De Valera's recent hints that there might be difficulties in a disunited Ireland should war come. This situation can be summed up in a sentence—Mr. De Valera favours moves towards reunion of North and South, but Northern Ireland is resolutely opposed to it, and Britain insists that it is a matter which must be settled between themselves by the two sides in Ireland.

Early, and lively, discussion will centre on the ways in which our £10,000,000 loan to the Czechs may be spent, and on the 250 Sudetenland refugees which Britain has decided to take. Those are a few of the foreign and defence problems which will be in the headlines soon.

AGRICULTURE TO FORE.

What of more homely matters? Nothing reveals the all-excluding magnitude of the crisis so much as to reflect upon the matters which were of great moment in July when the House adojurned. Topics then described as "sensations" are now forgotten. Even the "Sandys storm" has abated to some extent, although there will be a debate on the Committee's report and on the wide issue of the position of M.P.'s under the Official Secrets Acts, and whether they are or are not entitled to make use of "secret" information in the public interest. Important questions of principle are involved.

How many people remember what "Case 35a" was about? Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, may be asked about this case, which arose when a driving summons against Mrs. Mullins, wife of Mr. Claud Mullins, the Metropolitan magistrate, was at first referred to in court by a number instead of Mrs. Mullins' name being mentioned. The summons was dismissed, and later Mr. Mullins made it clear that he gave no special directions with regard to the case.

The Prime Minister's once-famous "Kettering speech" also seems to be very ancient history, notwithstanding that less than three months ago some agricultural M.P.'s who at first interpreted it as meaning a policy restricting British agricultural expansion, were declaring that a General Election might be fought on it Agriculture will be to the fore next sessions, and new measures, including one to safeguard the dairy industry against falls in prices, will be foreshadowed in the King's speech.

CURBING LOCAL EXPENDITURE.

Much is going to be heard of the campaign for curbing local expenditure which, it is argued, is now throwing unjustifiable rating burdens on millions of people. Mr. A. M. Lyons, K.C., who wants drastic economies, may raise it in the debate on the King's speech, or bring in a Bill suggesting that authorities whose rates are over 10s in the £ should have local government suspended. Sir Waldrow Smithers would like a Royal Commission to investigate all local spending, and Mr. Herbert Williams also has economy plans.

Two important measures that will be mentioned in the King's speech are the Penal Reform Bill and the Share-pushing Bill. The former contains new methods of dealing with habitual offenders and develops the probation system, while the latter protects gullible people by extending the registration of sellers and shares. If members of the energetic committee of seaside M.P.'s are lucky in the ballot for private members' Bills, there will be a reappearance of the Coast Protection Bill in which Mr. Stanley Holmes, Mr. Roland Robinson, Viscount Elmley, and others are interested.

THE YOUTH HOSTEL MOVEMENT.

ADDRESS BY MR. J. CALVERT.

SWISS CONFERENCE REFLECTIONS.

The second common room evening of the Youth Hostel Association was held in the Lombard Cafe, Belfast, on Friday evening, and was attended by more than 100 members.

Mr. J. G. Calvert, B.Com.Sc., chairman of the Y.H.A., gave an account of the international conference in Switzerland. This was the annual conference of the Federation of Youth Hostel Associations, and is held in a different country on each occasion. It was mentioned that next year's conference would be held in Scotland, and that the delegates would visit Belfast and Northern Ireland afterwards.

Mr. Calvert, in the course of his talk, said that the first conference was held in Cracow, Poland, in 1935, and was attended by delegates from Ulster. At that conference it became apparent that Germany intended to use the hostelling movement as a political weapon. Until then the open-air movement had been a democratic and non-political one. At the 1936 conference in Copenhagen, the democratic countries opposed Germany's policy with the result that the latter country resigned from the Federation, together with her satellite associations: Danzig, Schleswig, Estonia, Latvia, Roumania and Austria. This year's conference, however, was marked by the return of Germany. Reports were submitted to the conference with regard to the growth of the various youth hostel associations.

In U.S.A. where the hostelling movement is not more than three or four years old, membership is already about 10,000, with 200 hostels. In Belgium there are two associations, one Flemish, the other Walloon (French-speaking). Danish hostels are helped considerably by the Government and the municipalities, and 250,000 nights were spent in hostels in 1937. Germany built 140 hostels in 1937 at a cost of £2,000,000, and four hundred million nights were spent in German hostels. Each schoolchild in that country contributes a small sum monthly towards the hostels, and schools become hostels during the holiday months.

The English association has a membership of about 80,000, and has been [illegible] by grants from the Physical Fitness Council, another of £10,000 from the Government for the Depressed Areas. Municipalities have helped, too, and the Corporation of Brighton last year had presented a new hostel to the association. There are 18,000 Youth Hostel members in Scotland and 63 hostels.

Mr. Calvert went on to say that many of the problems encountered by the Northern Ireland Association were similar to those met by other associations. He instanced the insurance, taxation and rating of hostels, and said that very often one country's solution to such difficulties was of great help to others.

After the interval, Miss D. Huston described the tour to the French Alps organised by the Northern Ireland Association in July of this year. Her talk was illustrated by photographs and slides.

AT THE MOMENT—SILENCE.

"I didn't get a wireless licence because we are expecting a happy event in our family," wrote a defendant to Willesden Police Court.

THE SCHOLARSHIP SCHEME.

FERMANAGH DISCUSSION.

BASED ON COUNTY DOWN SCHEME.

At the meeting of the Co. Fermanagh Regional Education Committee in Enniskillen on Friday, the Earl of Belmore, D.L. (chairman) presided.

A letter was received from the Co. Down Regional Education Committee, stating that they had had under consideration the question of ascertaining the means of parents of applicants for scholarships, and that it is their intention in the future to ask parents or guardians to answer the following questions:—

Are you assessed for income tax? If so, what is—

(a) The gross total assessment?
(b) The allowance for expenses and wear and tear (if any)?
(c) The net income assessed?

Expressing agreement with the sentiments contained in the proposition, Dean Macmanaway, M.A., said that in many cases children were getting scholarships whose parents could well afford to pay for them, and the children of poor parents, unable to pay, were thus deprived of scholarships.

Colonel Barton, D.S.O., asked if the Dean had any instances of that occurring.

Dean Macmanaway said he had such a case in mind.

"INTENDED FOR THE POOR."

Mr. J. Coffey said from his own experience on the Finance Committee he had seen children getting scholarships whose parents had over £700 of an annual income. It was time something was done to amend the system. These scholarships were intended for the poor and in many cases they were not getting them at all.

The Secretary said that on the back of the application for the scholarship there was a statement of income and a declaration to be signed by the parent that he would not be able to send the child to a university or secondary school, as the case might be, unless he got a scholarship.

The Chairman said in County Down they were a much wealthier people than in Fermanagh. "Here no one had any money," he added.

Colonel Barton said the object of the resolution would be achieved in a more simple way if there were a provision that the parent must state whether he paid income tax and, if so, what amount.

It was agreed that this query should be made of parents of applicants for scholarships in future, instead of those suggested by the Down Regional Committee.

INQUEST ON BELFAST CARTER.

An inquest on the body of James Hughes (61), 57 Whitcrock Crescent, Belfast, was held by Dr. R. Reid, J.P., coroner, in Carrickfergus.

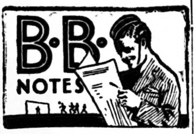
Alexander Spence said on Wednesday he looked into the sea and saw the body of a man lying on the sand.

Matthew M'Ferran said the body was lying in about a foot of water.

Jane Hughes (wife) stated that her husband had been a carter. He met with an accident over a year ago and practically ever since had complained about a pain in the knee. He was anxious to get back to work. He was in receipt of workmen's compensation.

Dr. Allen said death was caused by asphyxia as the result of drowning.

The jury returned an open verdict, no evidence being produced to show how the body got into the water.



HINTS ON STARTING COMPANY.

FIRST AID LESSONS.

HOW THE BRIGADE HELPS.

CONVENER AND DEMONSTRATION.

TO the many churches considering some organisation for the interest of boys we say: "Try the B.B. way." The Boys' Brigade leaflet entitled "On Starting a Company" can be obtained gratis from Boys' Brigade House, 14 May Street, Belfast, by anyone interested. A good start means a great deal, and if the advice given in this leaflet is followed, success should be assured.

One of the most important subjects taught in The Boys' Brigade is first-aid to the injured. Through their membership in the Brigade many thousands of boys have learned what is the right thing to do when an accident occurs while waiting for the doctor. As a result of this training lives have been saved and many accidents have been made much less serious than they might otherwise have been had there not been someone in the vicinity who had attended a B.B. first-aid class. Specially gratifying is the fact that so many boys having acquired an interest in first-aid while in the Brigade, continue their study after passing out of the ranks, and eventually become really proficient.

BATTALION CLASSES.

The Belfast Battalion has always taken up this work very seriously, and fostered interest in first-aid by classes, examinations, and competitions. In addition to the many company classes under private arrangements, three battalion classes have been arranged, to commence in St. Mary Magdalene Parochial Hall and Fortwilliam Presbyterian Church Hall on Friday, October 28, and in Mountpottinger Y.M.C.A. on Thursday, 27th.

Another important accomplishment for those who would be prepared to help others in an emergency is lifesaving, and arrangements have been made for a class to commence on Wednesday next at 7-30 in Boys' Brigade House.

The convener of the Battalion demonstration committee has issued to all companies a cordial invitation to take part in this session's event, which has been fixed for early February. His aim is at least to have fifty companies giving displays. The early session is the best time to plan such items, and that is why the convener is asking for offers at once.

COMPANY NEWS.

The 1st Belfast Company (St. Mary Magdalene Parish) has now entered upon its 51st session, and, judging by the programme already arranged, it is going to be a very busy one. Recruiting for this session is now finished, and according to a friend of the company, "this session's recruits are a lively lot." There is a certain subtlety contained in this remark. The special preacher at the enrolment service on the evening of Founder's Day (Sunday, 30th inst.) will be Rev. E. S. Barber, B.A., Bangor, an ex-officer of the company. Old boys of the "first" are specially asked to be present.

The 6th Belfast Company (St. James's Parish), the second oldest company in Ireland, formed in 1889 by the late Mr. John Hind, have now commenced their 50th session. Plans have been made so that this session should be a successful one, and already some of these have been carried out, such as an opening guest tea, which proved a great success. The enrolment service took place last week. The newly-formed football team had their first match to-day. The Jubilee inspection has been arranged to take place on March 30, and Mr. Wm. M'Vicker, overseas secretary, and son of the founder of the original 1st Belfast Company, has consented to be the inspecting officer.

CHAMPION BOY RUNNER.

The 10th Belfast Company (Mountpottinger Methodist) have now got things going in full swing. The gym. class, which commenced on Tuesday night, was well attended. There was a full attendance at the Bible class last Sunday to hear Mr. Harris, and his address proved very interesting. All boys extended their heartiest congratulations to Private N. Crooks on winning the 100 yards Ulster Boys' Championship. The football team under the care of Warrant Officer Neill is again going well, having only sustained one defeat so far.

The 11th Belfast Company (St. Paul's Parish) are celebrating their 21st year. A church parade and reunion have been arranged, and all former members of the company are requested to send their names and addresses to Mr. David B. Allen, 6 Kilronan Street.

The 14th Belfast Company (Oldpark Presbyterian Church) have heard with regret of the resignation of Mr. Thomas M'Killen from the captaincy. Mr. M'Killen has been captain of the company almost since its inception in 1922. Under his leadership the company have been most successful in the battalion competitions, especially in two important branches—first-aid and Bible-class work. Drill work improved greatly under his command, and in 1934 the junior drill shield was won.

The company have been fortunate to secure the services of Mr. Samuel Wright, M.Sc., an old boy of the company, as captain. The company numbers have reached 50. The Bible-class is again under the leadership of Mr. Curry. The football team has begun very successfully in the Senior League. Many N.C.O.'s are working for the proficiency certificate.

KING'S BADGE HOLDERS.

The 15th Belfast Company (Newington Presbyterian Church), at the request of the directors of Dr. Barnardo's Homes, organised during the week-end a house-to-house collection in Cavehill, Antrim, and Cliftonville Road districts in aid of that institution, and a substantial amount was collected.

Preliminary arrangements have been made for next year's summer camp, to be held at "Royal" Rothesay, Isle of Bute, Scotland, from 8th to 15th July, and already 70 boys are paying in weekly sums. All ranks are looking forward to their 28th annual enrolment ceremony to be conducted by Rev. Dr. Johnstone (chaplain) at the evening service in Newington Church on Founder's Day.

Sergeants Harold M'Ilhinney and Alexander Boyd have qualified for the much-coveted King's Badge, thus bringing the number of King's Badges won by the 15th Company during the 27 years of its existence up to 56, which is believed to be a record in the whole brigade.

The 16th Belfast Company (All Saints' Parish) will hold their annual parents' night on Wednesday next. The enrolment service will be held in All Saints' Parish Church on Sunday, 30th inst., during evening prayer, when the special preacher will be Rev. St. John Pike, M.A. A number of promotions have been made. Ex-Corporal M'Laren has undertaken the task of teaching a junior signalling class, and ex-Lance Corporal Herbert M'Claughlin the training of the Company choir. Ex-Lance Corporals Kenneth Thornton and Robert M'Cormac will assist with the Life Boy Team.

TROPHIES PRESENTED.

The 41st Belfast Company (Macrory Memorial Presbyterian Church) have recommenced all the Company activities of last year—Bible class, drill, gymnasium and physical training, club swinging, band and signalling classes, and club room. In addition a swimming class has been started. The Company has been extremely fortunate in securing the services of Mr. D. H. Hetherington as Company swimming instructor, and almost thirty boys are now taking up this branch of the work. The squad attendance medal for the last month was won by No. 1 Squad (Sergt. J. Blair), with 100 per cent. attendance; second place being taken by No. 2 Squad with 95.5 per cent. In efficiency several boys tied with full marks, and a special uniform inspection to determine the wearer of the medal was won by Pte. N. Black. The medals, together with one fireman's badge, two wayfarer's badges, and seven wayfarer's certificates, won by boys of the Company during the summer, were presented by the Company chaplain, Rev. James Patterson, B.A., at the drill parade on Tuesday night.

The 73rd Belfast Company (Gilnahirk Presbyterian Church) have made a good start for session 1938-39, with numbers slightly increased. A vaulting horse has been added to the equipment, and the boys are already showing themselves very capable. The Company is to take part in the Youth Day services in the Church on to-morrow, the enrolment of the Life Boys at the noon service and the enrolment of The Boys' Brigade at 7 o'clock. The Rev. F. O. Best, M.A., Company chaplain, is to conduct both services, and Major J. W. Harper, Company president, will read the lesson.

THE GARDENER'S CORNER

Plants To Get In Now For Spring Flowering

By "The Man With The Hoe"

PLANTS for spring flowering, such as wallflowers, myosotis, and polyanthus, should be got in without delay, as it is getting late now for planting. A fine lot of bushy wallflowers was seen in a garden. They should make a good display in April.

There is no use planting spindly, badly rooted specimens, as they will only cause disappointment. Some good varieties are Vulcan, Fire King, Cloth of Gold, and Ellen Wilmott. Harbinger, too, comes early, and it is brown in colour. Double varieties look well in pots in a greenhouse in early spring.

Leaves are now beginning to fall from the trees in quantity. They should be collected and stored in a pit specially dug out for the purpose, or placed in a mound to decay. From them in about a year's time valuable leaf mould will be obtained. As this is one of the most important ingredients used in potting it is always desirable to have a good quantity of leaf mould at hand to mix with the fibrous turf loam and sand in the proportions required, either for growing seedlings, striking cuttings, or for plants when being potted.

Mixtures Recommended.

The following mixtures are recommended by a specialist. For cuttings generally, equal parts of fibrous loam, leaf mould and sand. For seedlings, equal parts of fibrous loam, leaf mould, cocoanut fibre and sand. Peat might take the place of cocoanut fibre; then for general use in potting, six parts fibrous loam, three parts leaf mould, and one part of sand.

For special plants, horse manure, mortar rubble, peat and wood ashes are also added in small quantities, the fibrous loam predominating, say four parts, leaf mould two parts, and the others one part each. It is of course desirable to ascertain through a good gardening dictionary what ingredients each species of plant requires, as composts are the most important mixtures in the technique of gardening.

Christmas roses should now be kept clear of weeds and receive a top dressing along the sides of the plantation. Soil taken from a hotbed in which cucumbers or melons have been grown make an admirable mixture for this purpose. Buds of this admirable midwinter flower are now showing. Viburnumtinus is also now coming into bloom and will be in flower all winter; its name Laurustinus is perhaps better known.

Plant that Looks Well.

Polygonum cushidatum is still showing its feathery white flowers, which are useful to bring indoors. This knotweed grows to a height of six or eight feet and should be planted in a semi-wild spot where it can be allowed to spread, which it does rapidly. The climbing knotweed which grows to a height of from 20 to 30 feet, looks remarkably well with its white flowers over a verandah or a tall garden gate archway.

Besides these species there is one, P. amplexicaule, which has rose-red flowers. It grows to a height of three feet, and there is also another climber, P. Auberti, which has pink flowers in autumn. Wistarias are also beautiful climbers for houses, arbours, pergolas, and even grown up some trees. William Robinson admired one growing up a laburnum tree. He states that "the pale blue-purple racemes of the Wistaria and the golden ones of the laburnum make a fine contrast."

In the Kitchen Garden.

In the kitchen garden it is best to get all potatoes dug as opportunity comes. If there are too many to store under shelter, pits can be resorted to. White turnips should be used up or stored in sand, but Swedes may be left in the ground, as they can stand frost.

Beet should also be taken up and stored in sand. Worms have attacked this vegetable during the wet weather. Lettuce in some places have begun to bolt, and if hens are kept they should be pulled up and given to them, so that they won't be lost. The same applies to poor plants left in the cabbage plot.

Leeks are now in use and being young and tender are a tasty addition to the dinner menu.

Some gardeners sow broad beans this month, and if this is done in a sheltered sunny spot they will probably succeed and come earlier. The ground used should be dressed with lime, soot and wood ashes to keep slugs, grubs and other pests in subjection.

Sow Sweetpeas.

A sowing of sweetpeas in the open is sometimes also made at this time. They should have the same class of site and treatment as broad beans. The seeds should be sown three inches apart. Later they may be thinned out to six inches in the springtime. Growing sweetpeas in pots in a frame or greenhouse is, however, more satisfactory.

Green tomatoes which have not ripened can be used in making pickles for winter use. Some recipes are given in Modern Cookery books. The principal ingredients used are green tomatoes, onions and vinegar, with condiments, which see.

Colworts and spring cabbage appear to be growing well and will come in useful later. Cauliflowers and Brussels sprouts are in use at present and are appreciated at this time.

TOOK FIRE ENGINE AND AMBULANCE

TO THEIR DANCE AT DERRY.

UNIFORMS READY IN ENGINE.

Derry Fire Brigade went dancing on Friday night, but took their engine and ambulance with them.

It was the firemen's annual ball, and in order that practically a whole staff could go, it was arranged, in case of emergency, that the alarm should be carried from the stations over special lines to the ballroom. A call would have been heard all over the dance hall.

Firemen in dress-clothes, with their uniforms in a waiting engine, were thus able to dance with easy minds.

After the ball the fireman returned to duty.

The dance was organised by a committee of the Brigade in aid of the Professional Fire Brigade Widows' and Orphans' Fund, to which the Derry Brigade have contributed the largest amount in the United Kingdom during the past three years. In recognition of this, they have been awarded the Rawtensdall Shield for the past three years.

The organisation of the dance was directed by Chief-Officer Peter Gaylor and Second-Officer Treacher.

The M.C. was fireman Robert Heatley.

The catering, which was a feature of the dance and contributed much to its success, was carried out by the firm of Messrs. Hugh Stevenson & Co., Derry.

MESSRS. ROBSON'S SALE.

FOR ULSTER RAM BREEDERS.

Under the auspices of the Ulster Ram Breeders' Association Messrs. John Robson, Ltd. held a supplementary show in connection with their weekly breeding and store sheep on Friday. The judge was Mr. William Porter, who was assisted by Rev. R. J. M'Ilmoyle, secretary of the association.

There was an entry of 60 ram and live lambs and although on the late side there were plenty of customers to purchase strong robust rams for crossing purposes.

The awards and prizes obtained were:—

Border Leicester ram lambs—1, Mr. James O'Hare, who sold at 4gns.; 2, Mr. J. J. Minnis, 4½gns.; 3, Mr. James Aiken. A highly commended card went to Mr. Aiken, who sold his exhibit at 4½gns. Mr. R. W. M'Gregor sold his commended exhibit at 4gns.

Border Leicester ewe lambs—Mr. James O'Hare was also successful in capturing first prize for his exhibit, which he disposed of at 3¾gns.; 2, Mr. M'Gregor, who reserved his lot at 4gns.; 3, Mr. Arthur M'Coubrey's exhibit, which realised 3gns.

Many other lots of ram lambs outside the prize list made from two to three guineas and ewe lambs from 1½ to two guineas. Bidding was keen for sheep with size and substance but demand for other sorts was slow and sales were more difficult to effect.

Entries at the sale of breeding sheep were normal for the season and mostly composed of blackface ewes. Several pens of choice crossbred hoggets and crossbred ewe lambs were marketed. Transactions ruled similar to previous sale.

Mr. Kennedy sold two pens of blackface ewes at 35s and 27s respectively and 20 crossbred hoggets at 30s. Mr. Dicksen sold a consignment of 40 blackface ewes at an average of 23s.

Mr. Hamilton got 25s 6d for his pen of hoggets. Mr. Alexander obtained 24s 6d and 17s 6d respectively for two pens of ewe lambs. Other sales of blackface ewes were effected at prices ranging from 20s to 25s and crossbreds from 23s to 30s per head.

KILLYMAN YOUNG FARMERS.

At the annual meeting of the Killyman Young Farmers' Club on Friday evening, the following officers were elected:—President, Mr. H. Mitchell; club leader, Mr. S. Douglas; assistant leader, Mr. G. Greeves; secretary, Mr. H. M'Ilroy; assistant secretry, Mr J. Houston; treasurer, Mr. R. M'Ilroy; committee—Messrs. H. A. M'Minn, D. Patterson, G. Carroll, J. Johnson and M. Hazelton.

ROYAL ARMY SERVICE CORPS

ATTRACTIVE DANCE IN BELFAST.

Upwards of 350 guests attended the third annual dance given by the warrant-officers, staff-sergeants and sergeants of the Royal Army Service Corps, Belfast, in the Orpheus Restaurant on Friday evening This is the Golden Jubilee year of the R.A.S.C.

A novel feature of the ball was a small (but very smart) boy dressed in the full uniform of the Land Transport Corps, the predecessors of the R.A.S.C. The dress was that of a staff-sergeant, the boy proudly showing his three gold stripes and Queen's crown on the lower part of the left arm. It is believed that this is the very first time that this uniform has been seen in Ireland since the Land Transport Corps was disbanded in 1856, later to be called the "Military Train." Next to his soldierly figure and under his protection was a very charming little girl dressed in an early Victorian costume of 1856. As each lady came into the ballroom, she was handed a fan by the staff-sergeant, and a nosegay of flowers by Miss Early Victorian.

Mrs. Croker, wife of the R.A.S.C. commanding officer, was presented with a bouquet of white and yellow roses and blue decoration (the Corps colours) on entering the ballroom by Miss Victorian.

After supper two R.A.S.C. trumpeters sounded the "fall in," and the dancers lined up for the "Grand March Lancers" headed by the young staff-sergeant and his dainty girl friend. This presented a very colourful picture, as most of the dancers were wearing their carnival hats and novelties which had been distributed during the supper.

Amongst the principal guests were:—Lieut.-Colonel Croker, O.B.E., the R.A.S.C. Commanding Officer, and Mrs. Croker; Lieut.-Colonel Brewis, Commanding Officer of the Welch Regiment, and Mrs. Brewis; Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Hobday, Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Hewson, Major and Mrs. Prynne, Major Boileau, R.A.S.C.; Major and Mrs. Randall, Major Grant, Major and Mrs. Vint, Major Meysey Thompson.

All the Service units in the Northern Ireland district were well represented from their sergeants' messes, including petty officers of the Royal Navy, also from the Royal Air Force and Territorial units from Belfast.

The committee responsible for the organisation of the ball:—President, M.S.M. Hurdle, R.A.S.C.; S.S.M.'s Paul and Chinnery, C.S.M. Wright, Staff-Sergt. Spencer, and Sergts. [illegible], Warner, Moore, Deer and Barbour are to be congratulated on successfully organising a function that was thoroughly enjoyed and one of the best military events of its kind of the year.

Miss "Early Victorian" was Catherine, daughter of S.S.M. Paul, R.A.S.C., and the young soldier was Brendon, son of S.S.M. Chinnery, R.A.S.C.

FOUR ROAD TRAGEDIES.

IN WEST OF SCOTLAND YESTERDAY.

Four road tragedies occurred in the West of Scotland on Friday.

Engaged in road improvement work near Monkton, Ayrshire, William Devine (40), Whitlett's, near Ayr, was knocked down by a motor-lorry and instantly killed.

Martha Mary Donnachie, aged four years, daughter of Charles Donnachie, was fatally injured outside her parents' home at East William Street, Greenock, when she was struck down by a motor-lorry laden with ice.

Mrs. Jean Gray, aged 61, of Mansfield Street, Bathgate, was knocked down by a motor-car and died later in Edinburgh Infirmary. When admitted she was suffering from severe concussion and fractured legs and in a critical condition.

The death occurred in the same Infirmary of David Clark (14), Society Place, Pumpherston, Midlothian, who was involved, while riding a pedal cycle, in a collision with a motor-car and a motor-lorry on the Edinburgh-Glasgow Road.

GUIDE FOR BOOKLOVERS

A Novel of Real People

"William and Dorothy," by Helen Ashton (Collins at 8s 6d.)

"WILLIAM AND DOROTHY" could more aptly have been named vice versa. Dorothy, the poet's devoted sister, is the heroine of this delightful book about William Wordsworth and his circle. As an adventure in fiction, bringing together a literary coterie whose fame is world-wide, into the scope of a novel, it offers great dangers but fascinating scope.

Miss Ashton brings all her gifts as a novelist to her difficult task in writing of characters over whose actions she can have no control. She makes the Wordsworth family and their friends, Southey, Lamb and his sister Mary, de Quincey, Hazlitt, Sir Walter Scott, and above all Coleridge, come to life in a most attractive manner.

She begins her story with William and Dorothy living in Racedown House, eagerly awaiting a visit from William's great friend, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, whom Dorothy had never met. Critics differ on the question of whether Dorothy loved Coleridge and Miss Ashton holds that no woman could have any doubt on the matter, that her unrequited love "betrays itself in everything she wrote to or about him."

Love—the Main Theme.

SHE makes this love the main theme of her story, but whether she proves her point or not, Dorothy Wordsworth was too fine a woman to let her private disappointments spoil her life and while her feeling brought her only pain it never warped her nature.

With truth so much stranger than fiction and real life than imaginary drama, provided with a host of brilliant characters never to be found in novels, Miss Ashton has her story, background and people already created and so her main interest in their story is in the human relationships between Wordsworth, Dorothy and that erratic genius Coleridge. She finds them all curiously modern in their attitude and behaviour.

She develops with a sensitive understanding the relationships between Dorothy and William's wife, Mary Hutchinson, and with her younger sister Sara, who captured Coleridge's friendship from her, and with that other pathetic Sara, his wife.

Miss Ashton has made great use of Dorothy Wordsworth's Journals, those descriptive day-books which she wrote to please her brother, and by paraphrasing freely from these and by actual quotations from letters she is able to convey that consciousness of Nature in which the followers of the Lakeside school lived.

The loveliness of the changing seasons in the different parts of England where they lived, Racedown House, Nether Stowey, Dove Cottage have all been preserved through them. The descriptions of outdoor life and the walking tours the three took together are the most delightful feature of the book.

She gives an illuminating picture of the two poets which conveys in a few words the fundamental difference in their outlook to their work. The three friends were lying overlooking Watchet harbour watching a ship put out to sea and arguing as to how it was a proper subject for a poem, with William protesting that Coleridge would spoil it with his foolish fantastic notions of ghosts and spirits. Finally they agreed to write a poem together to be called the "Rime of the Ancient Mariner," but William with his liking for everything plain insisted on calling it the "Old Sailor," and so Coleridge was left to write it alone.

Visit to Germany.

THE rural scene is varied with their visit to Germany for a couple of not very happy years, and the tragicomic account of their visit to Calais to see William's one-time mistress, Annette, visits to London to stay with the Lambs, and the Highland Tour where they first met Sir Walter Scott.

Throughout Dorothy is the sheet anchor for these two bewildered and unhappy genii; her devotion and good sense is useless to save Coleridge from his tragic end, but for the dour and, as Miss Ashton presents him, unattractive, William she is the means of bringing him happiness in his family life and inspiration in his writing.

She comes to life a devoted sister, of intellectual gifts herself, content to serve and love without reward, as sweet and healthful as the breezes from the Cumbrian hills she loved so well.

"Shake Hands and Come Out Fighting" L. A. G. Strong (Chapman and Hall, at 10s 6d.)

"HOW could a man like you enjoy such a thing" was the horrified reply of a friend of the author when he first heard of L. A. G. Strong's interest in the ring. This reaction was apparently the incentive which produced "Shake Hands and Come Out Fighting" in which Mr. Strong sets out to explain his love of boxing and his enjoyment of prize fights.

Mr. Strong follows no set purpose in his writing. He has selected and recorded anything about boxing which gives or has given him pleasure, taking as his only limitation a time boundary of his own lifetime. There are various ways of describing fights and as he has found the average novelists' accounts invariably unsatisfactory with the action lost in a spate of words, graphic enough, but unintelligible to the plain man who wants to know what did actually happen, he has made his first aim accuracy, even at the risk of seeming prosaic.

"Prosaic" is Mr. Strong's own adjective, but he is far too modest in his use of it. His descriptions of fights, famous or unknown, have plenty of spirit and vigour and told with enough technical knowledge to please the learned without confusing the mere novice.

Corbett and Fitzsimmons and Jack Johnson are the veterans of the collection. Starting with the contest between the first named for the heavyweight championship of the world, and continuing to Burns, Jeffreys, and Willard, followed by Dempsey and Tunney, Carpentier, Beckett, and Bombardier Wells, the story is carried right down to Petersen, Benny Lynch, and even that modern question-mark of the boxing world, Jack Doyle.

With accounts of celebrated battles which have made ringside history, obscure fights in small provincial towns, deadly tussles in preparatory schools and boys' clubs, pen portraits of pugilist personalities and their friends, trainers, backers and producers, reminiscences of famous figures and stories of forgotten favourites, and plenty of capital photographs, here is the "bedside book" of boxing which is sure to make many friends.

ACCOUNT SQUARED

HE pushed open the door, cleared his throat, and spoke in a low voice.

"Can I see you a moment, sir?"

His employer, John Gatenbury, looked up. He had a stern face, was tight-lipped, and possessed that quality of aloofness which everyone feared. As he glared at Stanley Weycombe, his bookkeeper, his lip curled.

"What do you want?" he barked. "Can't you see I'm busy, that I have not finished my letters? Will you never understand, Weycombe, that I hate being disturbed, that I did not ring for you, and that you have not the slightest excuse for interrupting me at this hour?"

Weycombe, tall, lank, rather bald, stood his ground. He had heard all this before, knew the man with whom he was dealing, and moved forward two paces. It was a grim moment, yet he mustered his courage, and his grey eyes were resolute.

"I have come about that increase!" he announced. "You promised it three years ago, and I am still waiting. I am sorry to worry you, Mr Gatenbury, but my wife is an invalid, and medical expenses are heavy. I have waited a good time, and the business is improving every month. We have nothing to fear from Bigglewoode & Co., and I thought it an opportune moment ——!"

"Weycombe, listen to me," came the retort. "You have three pounds per week and you ought to consider yourself lucky. Business is not improving—not as much as you think—and although I promised you a rise, I can't afford it. Besides, Bigglewoode's are bringing out a new patent, and, if what I hear is correct, it may sweep the market. I must postpone your increase another six months!"

* * * *

"VERY good, sir!" Weycombe knew the alternative, but he was not thinking of it. His mind fastened on something else, and it tickled him a good deal. He moved back to the door, opened it slowly, then stood waiting. He saw his employer was still worried, that there was something on his mind, and he was right in that assumption.

"Glad you have taken it sensibly," Gatenbury snapped, pushing some papers aside on his desk, "but there is something else, Weycombe, and you must attend to it. I want that statement for the auditors, so you had better come back this evening, and have it for me to-morrow morning."

"Very good, sir!" Weycombe answered with a sigh. "You will have the statement to-morrow morning. I can do with the overtime. Every extra shilling counts these days. I shan't worry you about the rise again, sir!"

"You had better not!" Gatenbury growled, as the door closed, and he was left to his reflections. The telephone bell rang, and he was soon engaged in conversation. Had he known, however, that his bookkeeper slipped out for twenty minutes, or had he guessed Weycombe's destination, he might have been very much concerned.

The office staff, seven in number, remained loyal to Weycombe. They suspected his destination, but they made no comment. They knew, from his white face, that Gatenbury had turned him down.

The bookkeeper only said a few words to Kerstone, the head clerk.

"One day, my friend, Gatenbury and I will square accounts!" That was all. He slipped out into the London street, his eyes particularly bright, his lips more resolute than ever.

* * * *

KERSTONE took it as a threat. He knew what it meant, and he felt sorry for old Weycombe. It took a lot of courage to face Gatenbury for a rise, and the bookkeeper had lost the move. What would develop? It almost looked as if something was brewing, as if Gatenbury might be outmanœuvred.

"Old Gat. can think of nothing but his brass!" he muttered to Eileen Watson, the typist. "He's the meanest skunk in London, and no one has ever told him. Yet he can let his son Cyril gad about. That young cub should be sitting at a desk, just like one of us, then he might understand how Weycombe has to manage on three pounds a week. A poor wage for a London bookkeeper. Why, the job's worth a fiver!"

"Yes, but we all know about old Scrooge!" Eileen sniffed. "Don't say much about Cyril either. He has promised to take me out Friday evening, and in that swell car. He has his good points——!"

"You keep away from young Gatenbury!" he warned. "He's no company for you."

"Well, he's not mean like his father!" Eileen protested.

Weycombe kept his promise. He returned that evening to prepare the statement, but before he entered the premises of John Gatenbury, Ltd., he experienced a sudden thrill.

He had just turned the corner when he saw the light burning, and knew there was a burglar in the warehouse. No, the intruder was in Gatenbury's private office. There was no time to give an alarm. He must act quickly, carry out all the bluff he possessed, and convince his employer he was worth that rise.

Perhaps it was a foolish thing to do, but Weycombe did not hesitate a second. He had long wished to capture a burglar, to catch him in the very act, and that was why he carried a toy revolver. It was the joke of the office, for he produced it at intervals, and threatened, when things went wrong, to commit self-destruction. Then everyone would smile, and the crisis would dissolve.

* * * *

HERE was the chance to bring off a bluff, and, incidentally, to land a thief. The thing might get into the papers, his portrait would appear, and Elsie would be proud of him. Gatenbury, glad of the publicity to the firm, would hand out the rise and the situation would be saved.

Taking out his key, he slipped it into the lock, opened the door softly, and made his way forward in the darkness.

That toy revolver was in his right hand. It looked like the real thing, mighty like it. Weycombe chuckled, for he knew every inch of the way, and as he moved towards the private office, he knew the intruder was not disturbed.

He realised something else. That the burglar was working on Gatenbury's safe, that he might have opened it, that he was just in time to prevent a robbery—if that could be managed!

"Hands up!" he exclaimed, as he bounded forward. "I have you covered ——!" Then he paused in confusion, for the young man kneeling there was Cyril Gatenbury, and the safe was wide open. Indeed a cash box was lying on the floor, and a wad of notes was in the thief's hand. He stumbled awkwardly to his feet, clutched a ruler from the desk, then let it drop with an oath as he saw that weapon in Weycombe's hand.

"WELL, what are you going to do about it?" he asked cynically. "Hand me over to the police, and create a first-class scandal! Weycombe, you're not such a fool! I wanted the money badly, and the old man never gives me a proper allowance. He has kept me short for months, has paid me out, in that fashion, because I got pushed down from Oxford, and I have been playing the fool. Been gambling into the bargain, late nights, and all the rest."

Weycombe kept him covered. His grey eyes narrowed, but there was a gleam of sympathy in his face, and he motioned to the safe.

"Put all that money back," he ordered, "and answer one question. How much cash do you want, Cyril Gatenbury, for immediate needs. Make it as low as you can. I have some saved for a rainy day, and I may help. Your father will never hear about this—this incident. Would fifty pounds do?"

With a rush, the intruder pushed the money back in the safe, relocked the big iron door, and turned to the bookkeeper. His dark eyes were shining.

"Fifty pounds!" he repeated. "Great heavens, yes; that will do splendidly. Can you manage it, Weycombe? I will never forget you for this—but I must have the cash to-night. Can you get hold of it? . . . I was going to take two hundred from that safe, but fifty pounds will drag me out of a hole. Quick—can you get that sum before midnight!"

Weycombe nodded.

Weycombe was summoned the following morning. His employer looked less stern, but there was a weariness about his eyes. The bookkeeper stared at his white face. Surely ——!

"Have you got that statement?" Gatenbury asked in a harsh tone.

Weycombe handed him the few sheets of foolscap. After glancing at the total his employer cleared his throat. He seemed to speak with difficulty.

"Weycombe," he said at last. "I want to take you into my confidence. I have heard what happened last night. There was a motor accident, and my son was taken to hospital. An operation was necessary, but, before it took place, Cyril told me what he had done. There is your fifty pounds, and please accept my best thanks!"

* * * *

THE bookkeeper was startled. He counted the money spasmodically, almost as if he disbelieved his employer, then he thrust the notes into his pocket.

"Is he badly hurt?" he asked in a low voice.

"Well, it was a near thing" Gatenbury explained. "Bad injury to his left side, and he will stay in hospital a few months. Mighty good of you, Weycombe. I think you can have that rise. But don't ask me for any more. Not for another three years, at least—if you are with us for that time. The firm won't stand it!"

Weycombe regarded him with a smile. He even laughed outright, and Gatenbury moved uneasily.

"Thanks," Weycombe answered at last, "but you can keep your rise, John Gatenbury. I won't want it. You have only offered it to make certain I would keep my mouth shut. Fortunately, I am three streets ahead of you. I interviewed a director yesterday morning. I start in a week's time, at five pounds, with Bigglewoode & Co. I reckon our account is squared!"

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM

Winning snap in our Happy Childhood Photograph Competition this week is submitted by Mrs. John Hanvey, Rowallane, Saintfield, Co. Down.

Stories In Surnames

HARRINGTON AND ITS HISTORY

THIS has become a considerably general surname. It is one of great antiquity, and may be traced directly to parishes or estates. The title of the earldom was taken from Northamptonshire, while the baronets derived the name from the Cumberland parish.

There were, however, other parishes to add to the names of persons who could be described as de Harrington, and it would seem that Havrington also fed the supply. Indeed, the Cumberland parish of Harrington was itself once known as Haverington.

It may be expected, whether the name be now spelt Harrington or Harington, affords no trustworthy clue to any parish of origin. The Cumberland parish which was Haverington is now Harrington, but the surname of the most ancient family identified with it is Harington.

Their history goes back to the time of Edward II., when John de Haverington was summoned to Parliament. Of this family was Sir John Harington, who was tutor to Princess Elizabeth, daughter of James I. He became Baron Harington. It was a short-lived title for it expired with the next holder. The second Lord Harington was to have been one of the judges to hear the trial of Charles I., but he declined to sit.

A Stanhope took the title of Earl of Harrington from a Northamptonshire estate and not as a surname; but it may be noted, in passing, that it was the Countess of Harrington who pleaded so earnestly with Dr. Johnson to use his influence to save the unhappy divine, Dr. Dodd, from the gallows.

Sir John Harrington, who was born near Bath, served with Essex in Ireland and was knighted by him on the field. Queen Elizabeth was his godmother and he had been in much favour, but the Royal lady was highly displeased at this act.

The eleventh baronet of Cumberland, Sir Richard Harington, was a London magistrate, and afterwards a County Court judge for more than thirty years. Sir John Harrington, K.C.M.G., had served as Minister Plenipotentiary abroad, commanded a Battalion in the Great War, and made four gallant attempts to enter Parliament.

General Sir Charles Harington Harington, who was born at Chichester, was one of the big figures of the European War. He now holds the Gibraltar command.

Rt. Hon. Sir Stanley Harrington, of Cork, is a member of the Privy Council, who has taken a prominent part in Southern Irish affairs, and especially in problems of industrial development. Mr. Charles Harrington is a noted artist whose work is represented in many British and overseas art galleries.

A PLAIN MAN'S SERMON

The Bible Came Second

A long while ago I worked for a time as assistant curate in a town in the West Riding of Yorkshire. A very happy time it was. I have many pleasant recollections of it. Amongst the things which I remember are the giant Sunday school demonstrations which took place always at Whitsun, with processions of Sunday school scholars through the town.

The children carried banners, and I shall always remember one of the banners in particular which bore a remarkable inscription: "We won't give up the Bible!"

I need scarcely say that no one, so far as I could learn, had ever at any time demanded that these children should give up the Bible, or had cherished even the faintest desire to see them doing so. It therefore struck one as odd that they should so vehemently proclaim their refusal to do what no one was even dreaming of asking them to do.

All the same, the existence of that banner, with its queer inscription, was not without interest; for it showed plainly that those who had presented it to the Sunday school to be carried in procession had been under the delusion that the foundation upon which the Christian Faith rests is the Bible.

I have no doubt that there are multitudes of people who do believe this, and who therefore imagine that if the Bible were to be discredited the Christian Faith would [illegible] crashing to the ground. There is even, I fancy, a fairly widespread idea that this has already happened, and that modern Biblical criticism has knocked away the foundations of Christianity.

BUT that is, of course, merely a delusion, for the very simple reason that the Christian Faith was carrying on an extremely vigorous existence, and spreading rapidly over the Roman Empire more than twenty years before the first word, and more than sixty years before the last word, of the New Testament was written; and that it continued to expand for a further three hundred and fifty years before the New Testament, in its present final form, was collected together, and its contents definitely settled. In other words, there were hundreds of thousands of Christians already in the world at a date when no one could have stated authoritatively what the New Testament consisted of.

It is therefore pretty clear that the faith of the Church was not built on the foundation of the Bible, since that foundation was not yet there to build on. And not only was the New Testament not yet formed, but when it did presently come into existence, it was created by the Christian Church, and written by men who had already for many years been Christians.

Our common-sense should tell us that none but Christian men could have written the New Testament, and that these men must already have been holding and practising the Christian Faith before they could possibly write a book about it. Yet large numbers of people exist to-day who quite seriously imagine that the New Testament somehow appeared from somewhere or other, and then produced the Christian Faith.

The idea that "the Bible is the religion of Christians" arose as a consequence of what is known as the Reformation. For several centuries the Bible has been a closed book to the great majority of people, and, when, in the XVIth century, it was translated into English and the cost of it cheapened by the invention of printing, it was eagerly seized upon; and the unwarranted assumption gained ground that even the most ignorant people had only to read it for themselves in order to understand all about the Christian Faith.

A Faulty Foundation.

ALL sense of proportion and of the facts of history was lost. On the one side (so people thought) there was "the corrupt Church," and on the other side "the pure Word of God." The fact that the Bible was, after all, the book which the Church herself had written was entirely lost sight of, and people began to say that "their religion was the Bible!"

The real position is, of course, that the Church cherishes as her most priceless possession, the Holy Scriptures. They constitute her book of reference; her handbook of Christian morals, her storehouse of Christian history and experience. Above all the Scriptures enshrine the portrait of the Church's Lord and Master.

But the Church's faith is not built on the Book which the Church itself produced. It is built on its living Lord and Master, of Whose incarnate Life and of the consequences which flowed from that Life these Scriptures are the written record.

But the written record of the growth of a building is not the same thing as the foundation on which the building stands. We may suppose that the builders of new cathedrals will leave some record and account of how they came to be built. It will be a very interesting and valuable document. But the cathedrals themselves stand on a bed of living rock, and not on a document.

And the Bible is the written record of how the Christian Faith was founded and gradually built up. But it is the record, and not the foundation; for that foundation is not, and never has been a book. It is a person.

If, instead of carrying a banner which said, "We won't give up the Bible," these Sunday school scholars had carried one which said, "We won't give up the Lord Christ," it might have had some real meaning and have been a banner well worth while to display.

PNEUMONIA

IN no other disease does nursing play such an important part as in pneumonia. In the absence of intelligent nursing all treatment may be in vain. The first necessity for the patient is air, and the nurse must so regulate doors and windows that there is a constant stream of fresh air through the room.

Then the nurse can add greatly to the patient's comfort by sponging with tepid water when he is restless owing to high temperature.

It is very important that nothing is allowed to disturb him when he is asleep, and, finally, drinks should always be available because the pneumonia patient requires large amounts of fluid.

HANKOW BOMBS THREAT

CANTON COMMANDER SURRENDERS

GENERAL RETREAT ORDER

OBJECT TO SAVE CITY

AND PRESERVE HIS SOLDIERS

GENERAL Yu Han-Mou, Commander-in-Chief of the Cantonese Armies, has surrendered to Japanese forces with other officers, according to a Japanese Press report.

THE "NICHI NICHI SHIMBUN" SAYS GENERAL YU HAN-MOU ORDERED A GENERAL RETREAT OF HIS TROOPS WHEN JAPANESE FORCES WERE WITHIN STRIKING DISTANCE OF CANTON YESTERDAY.

His object, according to the newspaper, was to save Canton from imminent destruction and preserve the lives of his troops.

JAPS. WARN BRITISH SHIPS.

British ships in the Hankow area of the Yangtse were warned to-day to leave the neighbourhood by midnight to-night, says Reuter from Shanghai.

The Japanese announce that they intend to bomb the city relentlessly at that hour.

Their forces advancing up the river have reached a point 40 miles from Hankow.

JAPANESE COMMANDER.

Prince Kanin, Chief of the General Staff of the Japanese Army, to-day sent a telegram to Lieut.-General Furusho, Supreme Commander of the Japanese forces in South China, congratulating him on the Japanese entry into Canton.

IT HAD BEEN SUGGESTED THAT THE JAPANESE COMMANDER IN THE CANTON AREA WAS AN IMPERIAL PRINCE.

HARROWING CANTON SCENES

CANTON, Saturday.—The Japanese army has not yet made a formal entry into Canton. Scenes inside the city resembling those portrayed in Dante's "Inferno" are occurring there.

Mingled with thousands of homeless and dazed refugees squatting huddled together with their small belongings beside them, lie hundreds of appallingly maimed civilians who were wounded in recent air raids.

They have been turned out of the hospitals, the staffs of which have been evacuated, and are in sore need of food and water, neither of which is procurable.

Here and there lies the body of an over-eager Militia man who in anxiety to persuade the populace to evacuate, pulled the trigger of his rifle to which he was not accustomed.

The buildings destroyed in the dynamiting yesterday include the prison, from which the thousand inmates had first been liberated.

The old waterworks was burned to the ground, but the new waterworks now being constructed by the British firm of Macdonald & Company has not been damaged.

The attempt to destroy the Pearl River bridge was not successful, only one span being damaged.

The Japanese go-downs (warehouses) are intact, attempts to set fire to them miscarrying.

The only resistance so far offered by the Chinese was put up by a mechanised unit several miles outside Canton, which stemmed the Japanese advance for three hours till it was completely wiped out.

Two British subjects, believed to be the only foreigners in the Tungshan district when the Japanese entered Canton, are now stated to be safe. They are the Rev. Nelson Victor Halward, M.C., who hails from Canterbury, and Mr. A. E. Peile, formerly of the London police.

Mr. Halward was curate of St. Saviour's, Croydon, from 1922 to 1925. He has held appointments at Hong Kong and Canton.

He and Mr. Peile are attached to the Church Missionary Society.

It is understood that the missionaries remained in the compound of Holy Trinity College, Canton, to afford protection to the occupants and church property. The majority of the College students had already been evacuated.—Press Association Foreign Special.

POSITION OF HONG KONG

Hong Kong took stock of its position on Friday night, as confirmation came that Canton had fallen to the Japanese forces after one of the most amazing spearhead drives through 130 miles of hostile country in nine days, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

The British colony, which ordinarily imports and exports 15 per cent. of the total Chinese trade, is facing ruin, as the Japanese straddle its frontier and surround its seas with warships, effectively blockading it from the rich hinterland upon which it relies for its financial and economic existence.

Since last week, when the Japanese Army finally isolated Hong Kong from China by cutting the vital railway into the interior, Hong Kong's inland trade has been at a complete standstill.

The colony relies on Canton for the major portion of its perishable goods, and the arrival of the vital necessities of life, such as meat and vegetables, has been blocked.

Japanese warships have even destroyed many of the junks which attempted to run the blockade and bring cattle, pigs, and other livestock by the Pearl River delta or the eastern coast.

The colony's food position is daily becoming more and more serious as the inadequate gardens and dairies in the leased territories rapidly become denuded of supplies. Prices have increased alarmingly since last week, making purchases prohibitive to the poorer classes.

MAIN ARMY HELD UP.

The occupation of the eastern suburbs of Canton was made by a column numbering no more than 3,000 troops, all belonging to a completely mechanised unit which had marched up the Hong Kong-Canton Railway from [illegible], captured last Monday.

Simultaneously the main body of the invading army, which had approached Canton along the main Hong Kong-Canton highway by way of Waichow and [illegible], converged on the city via [illegible].

Held up for a day while reducing strong Chinese opposition at Tsengching the main army lost the honour of being first to raise the Rising Sun at the gates of Canton. The army was only 12 miles from the city at one p.m. yesterday and joined the column encamped at the east gates at 4-30. The two forces jointly carried out the formal [illegible] occupation of the entire city [illegible] to-day.

Chinese resistance in Canton [illegible]ended when it was learned before breakfast that the provincial, municipal, and army leaders had fled to an unknown destination [illegible] the few remaining Chinese [illegible] to blow up the defences and the [illegible] and public utility buildings.

PEOPLE IGNORANT OF ADVANCE.

The first intimation of the disaster to the populace, which had been entirely ignorant of the Japanese advance, by a strict censorship, when the great British-built bridge spanning the Pearl River was suddenly shattered with a roar as dynamite exploded at its foundations.

This was quickly followed by the destruction of the city's electricity plant, the municipal cement works, military [illegible], and the provincial and municipal buildings.

The Japanese vanguard was marching past Sun Yat-Sen University towards the deserted fashionable suburb of Tungshan three fires were burning fiercely in the heart of Canton.

Notwithstanding the proximity of the Japanese, who did not attempt to occupy the central and western sections of the city, Chinese refugees still continued to collect their belongings and board the waiting junk ferries, the crews of which calmly returned again for passengers wishing to cross the river and leave Canton.

Fearing that civilians might attempt to storm British and French concessions on Shameen, in the event of the Japanese continuing the advance, the authorities manned the pill-boxes and trenches around the island with sailors, who were landed from four British gunboats and French, Italian, and American warships.

These were anchored a few yards from where the Chinese had scuttled the remains of their own fleet early in the morning.

Two bridges over the canal dividing Shameen from the city were barricaded with sandbags and barbed wire, and neither entry nor departure was allowed all day.

HONG KONG'S "WAIT AND SEE."

HONG KONG, Friday.—The Japanese occupation of the eastern part of the city of Canton is established, but a huge Chinese army is within striking distance, and the Japanese tenure would become most precarious without the arrival of reinforcements, which, however, are reported to have landed at Bias Bay.

With triple the Japanese numbers, the Chinese Army could still divide and obliterate the invaders, and the opinion here is "wait and see. China has either been sold or is about to strike."—Exchange.

FRENCH PAPER AND BRITAIN.

PARIS, Saturday.—"Peuple," the organ of the French T.U.C., states to-day that it cannot be emphasised too strongly that the fall of Canton is due to the complaisance of Britain.

"Between the lines of Tokio's communiques one can read the words, 'Thanks to London'" The paper continues—"Britain, whose slightest reaction would have thrown the whole expedition out of gear, never stirred. Why? Because she wishes to put Japan in a mood for mediation, and she believes that only the taking of Canton and Hankow will do that."

"Figaro" says—Everything indicates that Germany will soon prepare for a new sharing out of the Far East. The hour for negotiations has struck.

WHAT THE FALL OF CANTON MEANS.

FROM RONALD MONSON

(By arrangement with the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post").

The fall of Canton, capital of the Kwangtung Province, and the most important city in South China, is the greatest disaster suffered by the Chinese since the loss of Shanghai at the beginning of the war.

With its capture Hankow's last lifeline has been severed, and its fall cannot now be long delayed. Since the Japanese forces closed the Yangtse River, China's main source of war supplies from abroad has been via the Canton-Hankow Railway.

Supplies from Russia, as Mr. W. H. Donald Marshal, Chiang Kai-Shek's British adviser, assured me months ago, never reached any considerable proportions, and even that flow has been seriously checked by recent Japanese successes in North and Central China.

The cutting of the Canton-Hankow Railway means that the Japanese forces now have the whole of China in their grip. That does not mean that China's resistance will collapse.

The policy of the Chinese High Command will continue to be to draw the Japanese forces deeper and deeper into the heart of the country, harrying them with guerilla tactics and refusing to meet them in a pitched battle on a grand scale.

SEVERE BLOW TO CHINA.

On March 8 of this year I interviewed Gen. Wu Teh-Chen, Governor of the Kwantung Province in Canton. He then said: "Hankow may fall before the Japanese advance and the long deferred invasion of South China will probably eventuate, but Japan is more and more surely heading towards disaster.

"There is a lot of talk of Japan halting and consolidating her gains. She cannot do that.

"Such a consolidation would require the co-operation of the Chinese in the captured areas, and this would never be forthcoming. She must push on to her ultimate downfall. We shall lose battles but we shall win the war."

Japan is certainly winning the battles. Whether Wu Teh-Chen's prophecy concerning the ultimate outcome will be fulfilled I would prefer to leave to events to tell.

Apart from the fact that the city controls the rail and river routes to Hong Kong in the south and Hankow in the centre, the loss of the greatest city in South China might well be regarded in itself as a tremendous blow to the Central Government.

At one swoop the enemy had seized a city of nearly 1,000,000 inhabitants, with its cotton factories—one on the Island of Honnam, a £300,000 concern equipped with modern machinery—match factories, a glass works, paper mills, hundreds of workshops producing hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of silk and cotton goods yearly, and an important arsenal.

The investment of the Kwantung Province will place a region rich in minerals, including important wolfram deposits, and important as a fruit, vegetable, egg, camphor and tea producing district in Japanese hands.

The fall of Canton will strike a serious blow at the prosperity of Hong Kong. One of the largest seaports in the world, it will lose at one stroke the bulk of its trade with South China.

BRITONS SAFE.

Although the Japanese forces have reached Canton much sooner than was expected, the British Government is satisfied that adequate arrangements have been made to protect British lives in the Canton district, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" diplomatic correspondent. As the British Concession lies on Shameen Island British subjects are secure from Canton street hostilities and in a position to stem the tide of refugees.

Several British authorities on China maintain that the fall of Canton, important as it is, is by no means a decisive Japanese gain. China is too vast and resilient, they say, to be subjugated by foreign troops stationed in a few key towns.

HANKOW'S EARLY FALL EXPECTED.

Renewed Japanese pressure on the Yangtse, which accompanied the fall of Canton, indicates the possibility of an early collapse of the Hankow defences, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Shanghai correspondent. The Japanese are already reporting signs of a break-up among the Chinese troops.

The Provincial Government taking part in a large-scale official civilian evacuation of Hankow has moved to Ichang. Japaneses forces advancing down the Peking-Hankow Railway report further successes. Troops operating south of the Yangtse have captured the strategically and economically important town of Tayeh, Central China's greatest iron ore centre. Before hostilities began the Japanese bought 400,000 tons from this place every year.

The capture of Tayeh places the key Wuhan cities, the second defence line of the Chinese, in Japanese possession, and ensures the provision of a considerable quantity of essential supplies for Japanese war purposes and for other industries. Japanese efforts to reinforce their success at Canton are being intensified. That, it is felt, will react on Hankow and bring hostilities nearer to a close.

JAPANESE SILK TRADE.

U.S.A. DAMAGE TO MARKET.

American manufacturers of silk stockings yesterday predicted that the plans of the Celanese Corporation of America for a £2,000,000 factory at Pearlsburg, Virginia, would cause a major upheaval in the economic position of Japan by seriously damaging that country's market in the United States for raw silk, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" New York correspondent.

The projected factory will produce a new synthetic yarn, which can be put to a variety of uses in the manufacture of textiles, but which it is believed will prove especially suitable for stockings.

A similar yarn will be produced in large quantities at the £1,400,000 factory, which the Dupont Co. is building at Seaford, Delaware.

It is pointed out that from the £20,000,000 worth of raw silk imported annually by the United States, 90 per cent. of which comes from Japan, about £15,000,000 worth is used for hosiery.

PEGGY COCHRANE BEREAVED.

Husband of Miss Peggy Cochrane, the pianist, Dr. Disney Hubert Cran died at his London home on Friday night.

It is understood that an inquest is to be held on Monday.

Before going to London Dr. Cran held a number of appointments at hospitals in Scotland.

A New York telegram says—Dr. John A. Harriss, who claimed to have originated the idea of traffic lights and one-way streets, has died here.

BELFAST BOUNDARY.

SHOULD IT BE EXTENDED?

COUNCILLOR IN DEBATE.

The question "Should Belfast Municipal Boundary be extended?" was the subject of an animated discussion in Clarence Place Minor Hall, Belfast, on Friday evening under the auspices of the Church of Ireland Young Men's Literary and Debating Society. The opening speakers were Alderman R. Pierce and Councillor F. J. Lavery for the affirmative and negative respectively. There was a large attendance.

At the beginning of the proceedings Mr. A. W. M. Kerr, who presided, congratulated Councillor Lavery on his recent election as President of the Central Presbyterian Association.

In opening his address on the affirmative side, Alderman Pierce said the growth of the suburbs created curious anomalies. In some cases tenants of houses on one side of a road which was within the city boundary paid 10s in the £ rates, whereas on the other side they only paid 5s 6d, being outside the city, and the rents were accordingly lower. Many residents in suburban areas like Finaghy were engaged in business in Belfast and made their living there, but they objected to being liable for contributing to the city rates, which would be the case if such districts were brought within the boundary. The additional burden on Belfast rates caused by the extension of the boundary would probably not be more than 2d or 3d in the £ and as against this the load would be lightened by bringing in people who ought to share it.

Alderman Pierce complained that residents in Dundonald, Cregagh, Finaghy and Glengormley areas benefited by low bus and tramcar fares, being able to get to the terminus for 2d or 3d. He thought that these charges should be raised and the extra profit applied to giving the dweller in the city longer stages for penny fares. If the boundary were extended, large-scale town planning schemes now in abeyance could be put into operation and give employment to many of the workless people in their midst.

THE NEGATIVE SIDE.

Councillor Lavery, in replying for the negative, said that five years ago he had been one of the pioneers in urging the extension of the city boundary, but had now come to change his mind. The last extension, which took place in 1896, cost an addition to the rates of 6½d in the £, and they were still paying for it to-day. The proposed extension would probably mean an addition of 1s in the £, which was unadvisable in view of the present state of trade. There were to-day 700 vacant shops in the city and 50,000 unemployed. They had been hard hit by the recent revaluation. The extension of the boundary would probably bring in another 10,000 unemployed who would have to be provided for. Electricity, gas, drainage and water supplies would have to be provided in the new areas and he thought the estimated addition of 2½d in the £ to the rates would be far exceeded. Roads would have to be made and public health services extended. At the present time schemes for the prevention of flooding and the extension of public parks had to be shelved owing to the financial position of the city. They wanted to keep the rates as low as possible. Moreover, local authorities like Down County Council, which stood to lose heavily by the extension of the city boundary, were opposed to the scheme and had never been properly consulted.

In the ensuing discussion Messrs. J. Leech, S. Robinson, Fitzgerald, Kielty, A. H. O'Reilly, R. J. Browne, J. M. Lamb (general secretary), and a number of others took part.

Alderman Pierce and Councillor Lavery having replied were jointly accorded a vote of thanks on the motion of Mr. J. H. Simms, seconded by Mr. J. Hamilton.

SUB-POWER STATION FIRE.

LONDON WOMEN TERRIFIED.

Terrified women fled from their homes on Friday night fearing a possible explosion when fire was thought to have broken out in the Bethnal Green electricity sub-station in New Tyssen Street, Bethnal Green, London E.

Children playing with fireworks had, apparently, pushed pieces of wood and paper through pavement lights at the back of the sub-station and started a bonfire, and smoke filled the sub-station.

Electricians ran out with buckets of water and fought to prevent the flames reaching cables charged with 6,000 volts.

An emergency call was sent to the fire brigade, who with the use of the first aid hose, were able to save the interior of the sub-station from damage.

TO-DAY'S MALONE WEDDING.

PINKERTON—BENSON.

The bride's brother officiated at the wedding in St. John's, Malone, this afternoon. Miss Annette Elizabeth Benson is daughter of Mr. John Benson, Eglantine Avenue, and the late Mrs. Benson, and sister of Rev. W. J. R. Benson, B.A., rector of St. Michael's. The latter was assisted by the rector of Willowfield, Rev. John Frazer, B.A., at to-day's ceremony.

The bridegroom, Mr. Thomas Harold Pinkerton, is son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Pinkerton, Flowerdale, Ballinamallard. He is principal of a Co. Down school, and was accompanied to-day by Mr. Norman Hoey, B.A., as best man. Mr. R. S. Benson, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Crawford Little, cousin of the bridegroom, were groomsmen.

The bride wore a smart gown of ivory velvet. The bodice featured the new high neck line, the fan shaped train was in one with the Edwardian skirt. The veil, lent by Mrs. W. J. R. Benson, was bordered in silver and worn in conjunction with a pearl headdress, and she carried a two-way sheaf of lilies and white heather.

The bride's sister and cousin, Miss E. Benson and Miss Bessie Nixon, and the bridegroom's sister, Miss Hazel Pinkerton, were bridesmaids. Their becoming frocks were of Bramley green velvet, the skirts slightly trained, the bodices completed by matching boleros. Each wore a sash of velvet and silver lame to match her headdress, and carried roses shading from pink to cream.

About 50 guests were entertained in the Grand Central Hotel during the afternoon. The honeymoon will be spent in London. Going away Mrs. T. H. Pinkerton wore a tailored suit of green with small matching hat, and a cape of Kolinsky sable, the bridegroom's gift.

The bride's gown and going away costume, the bridesmaids' dresses, and the entire trousseau were supplied by Miss KKennedy, 16 Donegall Place, Belfast.

The wedding cars were supplied by Messrs. Wilton, Rosewood Buildings, Crumlin Road.

DUNGANNON DANCE.

The annual dance organised by the Old Girls' Association, Dungannon High School, was held in the Ranfurly Ballroom, Dungannon, on Friday evening. The committee in charge of the arrangements comprised Miss M. E. Morton, M.A., headmistress of the school; Miss P. M'Manus and Miss M. Leith. The music was supplied by Miss Kitty Ivory's dance band. Spot dance prizes were won by Miss D. Irwin and Mr. E. Maitland, Dungannon, and an elimination dance was won by Miss M. Patterson, Dublin, and Dr. Devlin, Pomeroy.

WITH BOY SCOUTS.

PHYSICAL CULTURE.

FEATURES OF RELAY RACE.

WELL-ORGANISED EVENT.

The health and strength of the world's youth is now considered so important that some countries use compulsion to ensure that boys and girls are as physically fit as exercises and games can possibly make them. Whether they like it or not, boys in Germany and Italy have to take a course of training, and if appearances count for anything they certainly derive great benefit from their exercises. In this country games are played for the sheer joy of playing and no laws are necessary to make people take part in them.

The great interest being taken by Scouts in physical activities was further demonstrated by the enthusiasm manifested in the recent swimming competitions. A South Belfast Troop, 12th Belfast, obtained 1st place in the Scout section; 23rd Belfast (Whiteabbey) and 17th Belfast were second and third respectively. Fourth and fifth places were taken by the 25th and 10th Belfast. In the Wolf Cubs section the 24th Belfast (Knock Methodist) were 1st; 25th Belfast (Y.M.C.A.) 2nd; 66th Belfast (Cregagh Presbyterian) 3rd, and the 37th Belfast gained 4th place. In addition to these annual swimming competitions, a new trophy is also to be competed for on a percentage of points basis. This trophy, a cup presented by Mr. Lloyd Campbell, President of North Belfast District, is for the encouragement of life-saving. It will be awarded to the Troop which obtains the greatest percentage of points through the gaining of Swimming and Rescuer badges each year. Each Swimming badge will gain five points and the Rescuer badge will count ten points. The competition is open to Scouts under 18.

THE RELAY RACE.

Not the result, but the event itself, with all its friendly rivalry and comradeship, was what mattered to East Belfast each year in the organising of their annual relay race. Captain W. Cecil Whiting, chairman of East District, speaking in the Carlton Hall after the race on Saturday last, stressed his District's desire for closer contact with other local associations, and particularly with Troops from provincial areas. The increasing popularity of the race with Troops outside the District brings a greater entry every year, and when a visiting team succeeds in gaining the honours and the cup, as Magherafelt did last Saturday, it gives added incentive to future East efforts and sets a fine example for other visiting Troops. As Captain Whiting took pains to drive home to both Scouts and officers, the race itself was a great event, but the very evident enjoyment of everyone who took part more than compensated the East officials for their weeks of hard work.

MAGHERAFELT'S SUCCESS.

The Magherafelt boys are indeed to be congratulated on their fine achievement in getting past the finishing rope ahead of such splendid teams as the 22nd Belfast and the 42nd Belfast. The South Belfast boys (42nd), making their first appearance in the race, were certainly a credit to their District. The new triangular course on the Belfast Harbour Estate proved a boon in many respects, though there were some who deplored the absence of more colourful aspects of previous races on the public highway between Holywood and Belfast. The organisers, however, were very pleased with the success of the race, and considered that freedom from the hazards of running on a busy road added considerably to the enjoyment of the race. Credit for the organisation is due to District Commissioner J. H. Norritt, Captain W. Cecil Whiting, A.D.C. Thomas M'Mullan, A.D.C. R. R. Clark, District Cubmaster G. F. S. Newman and several others. Both local Scouts and visiting teams were grateful to Major William Baird, D.L., J.P., for entertaining them to tea after the race. The teams from Magherafelt, Limavady, and Portstewart returned home on Saturday night, and the 1st Enniskillen remained until Sunday morning as the guests of the 37th Belfast. They were accompanied to the railway station by the East Commissioner, Mr. J. H. Norritt.

NORTH BELFAST PROGRESS.

Within the past four years there has forged ahead in North Belfast a Scout Troop that bids fair to rival in achievements any past or present Belfast Troop. This Troop, the 48th, of Rumford Street, is now a force to be reckoned with in North Belfast, and its number is perhaps one of the best known in the district. Not a little of the credit is due to Scoutmaster W. H. M'Calmont for the Troop's present high level of efficiency, and with three other very capable officers to guide and instruct the 40 boys it may safely be assumed that the 48th will continue its steady climb. Over 50 proficiency badges have been gained this year, and in this important branch of Scout work the 48th are second in the district. The Troop has a team in the Junior Scout League, and has also a senior team (average age 18) that is willing to play friendly matches anywhere. Physical education in the form of tumbling and boxing continue to hold popular interest, an interest that is being fostered by instruction from Mr. Alfred M'Cutcheon. The Troop camp fund, already well organised, is in the hands of Patrol Leader Ewing Caruth. Some of the boys have actually paid almost all the cost of next year's camp. The Scout's Own every Sunday morning has a splendid attendance. A chaplain, Mr. Andrew Smith, has been appointed.

EAST BELFAST ACTIVITIES.

In East Belfast the 26th Troop (Cregagh) continue to hold a foremost place in Scouting. It has been found necessary to form a new Patrol. This Patrol, named Curlew, is under Patrol Leader Cecil Martin, with Jack Wallace as second. Scoutmaster Leonard Mills is very pleased with the efficiency of his Troop and is furthering in every way possible the physical education side of Scouting. The Troop has teams in both the junior and senior football sections.

The Rover Scouts of East Belfast have formed a table tennis league. District Rover Leader Norman Nesbitt, B.A., presided, when representatives of a number of Rover Crews met to arrange fixtures and elect office-bearers. Group Scoutmaster C. Boreland was elected chairman and Scouter B. Boreland, 31 Montrose Street, is to act as secretary.

COLERAINE ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the Coleraine Association of Boy Scouts on Friday evening, District Commissioner C. A. Munro, J.P., presiding, it was reported that steady progress was being made everywhere and that there was an increase in the membership of the local association. The hon. secretary's report was presented by Mr. R. W. Davison, and a satisfactory financial statement was also presented.

The appointments were:—President, Sir Charles E. Stronge, Bart., H.M.L.; chairman, District Commissioner C. A. Munro, J.P.; vice-chairman, Alderman R. F. M'Cartney, J.P., Mayor of Coleraine; hon. secretary, Mr. R. W. Davison; hon. treasurer, Mr. G. H. B. Hodges; executive committee, Rev. W. Abbott, M.A., Rev Norman Stocks, District-Inspector H. S. Robinson, Dr. W. F. Evans, Messrs. W. Jackson, J.P., G. R. B. Bell, and J. S. S. Henry.

THE KING AND QUEEN.

STARVATION THREATENS FILM COMPANY

MAROONED ON STORM-SWEPT ISLAND

Landing from a small boat with half a gale blowing was the sort of thing they had to face.

NIAL MacGINNIS star in the 'Edge of the World' tells you the secret that kept them going

A dramatic scene from the film itself.

Picture by courtesy of British Independent Exhibitors Distribution Co. Ltd.

'Edge of the World'— a film based on life in the remote Islands of Shetland — was made entirely on location. The work was arduous — climbing the steep cliffs (1,100 feet) buffeted by the wind, taking and retaking the same shot till it was perfected. Sometimes it meant fourteen hours at a stretch. It was dangerous, too — the insurance companies refused to insure the actors. Yet when going far from our base it was not always possible to have proper mid-day meals. Then it was that Cadburys Milk Chocolate came in most usefully to me. A bar of Cadburys was easy to carry and completely satisfying.

CUT OFF FOR TEN DAYS

For a time during a bad period of storms the 'Edge of the World' company were stranded on Foula Island with communications to the mainland cut off for ten days. During that time supplies ran short and once again I found Cadburys filled a grave need.

THAT'S WHEN CADBURYS MILK CHOCOLATE FEEDS YOU ON YOUR FEET—HELPS YOU TO KEEP THE CAMERAS TURNING

CADBURYS
CHOCOLATE

WHETHER you're marooned on an island, hemmed in at a football match, or shut up in an office with a pile of work to get through, you'll find Cadburys Milk Chocolate the ideal quick meal. Cadburys is cram-full of nourishment—'cream-full' in fact, with a glass and a half of milk in every half-pound, as well as the high food value of the chocolate itself. Whenever work gets you down and you get that empty feeling, remember that Cadburys Milk Chocolate is more than something that's nice to eat — it's the finest energy snack known. And it's so handy — just slip a 2d. block into your pocket, handbag or desk drawer.

COALISLAND WILL BENEFIT

NEW BRICK WORKS TO BE STARTED.

Intimation that the construction of a new brick works, capable of an output of 250,000 bricks weekly, would shortly be undertaken at Coalisland for Messrs. John Kelly, Ltd., was made by Mr. James Musgrove, J.P., at the quarterly meeting of Cookstown Local Employment Committee on Friday evening.

The new brickyard, which would cost between £40,000 and £45,000, would, he said, absorb a lot of local labour and give much-needed employment.

The contract had been given to a cross-Channel firm, and the preparation of the site, for which about 50 acres had been purchased beside the town, would start in the near future. It was reckoned that between 20,000 and 30,000 tons of earth would have to be removed in levelling the site.

Mr. Musgrove stated that the demand for brick at present was very considerable.

The announcement was made after the secretary had reported that there was an increase in the number of persons wholly unemployed in the Cookstown, Magherafelt and Dungannon areas (the latter including Coalisland).

At Dungannon Employment Exchange the total was 1,478 as compared with 1,371 in August; at Cookstown 640 as against 518; and at Magherafelt 928 as compared with 869.

DEATH OF SIR J. P. GRIFFITH

DISTINGUISHED IRISH ENGINEER.

An outstanding figure in the engineering profession in Ireland passed away on Friday in the person of Sir John Purser Griffith who resided at Rathmines Castle, Dublin. He was in his ninety-first year.

Sir John was the son of a Congregational minister, the late Rev. Wm. Griffith. He was educated at Devizes and Seeds, and after taking his M.A. degree at Trinity College, Dublin, was admitted a member of the Institute of Civil Engineers. When but 22 years of age he was appointed an assistant surveyor for Co. Antrim.

A year later he became Assistant Engineer to the Port and Docks Board, and subsequently became Chief Engineer.

He was responsible for many great improvement schemes on the Liffey, and the deepening of the bar and the channel.

Sir John was knighted in 1911, and retired in 1913. He was a member of the Royal Commission on Canals and Waterways and was engaged on many works of national importance. From 1919 to 1920 he occupied the position of President of the Institution of Civil Engineers of Ireland, and also of the British Institution.

SCOTS FUSILIERS COMMAND.

The War Office announces that Major T. M. Lawrie has been selected for Command of the 4th/5th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, vice Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet Colonel J. D. Oatts, whose tenure expired on October 21.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

PUBLIC REMAIN APATHETIC

BRITISH FUNDS RALLY

HOME RAILS FURTHER DEPRESSED

LONDON, Friday Night.—In the past week the markets of the Stock Exchange have oscillated in reflection largely of the trend of Wall Street. The amount of business passing has remained exiguous to a degree. The indications are that there would be an immediate response to any real prospect of improvement in the international political sphere, but that until that desirable consummation the public at large will remain obstinately apathetic to the allurement of the stock and share markets.

SEE-SAW GILTS.

British Government stocks were depressed at the beginning of the week by the fresh heavy fall in the sterling exchange rate, but they have since staged a good recovery in sympathy with the improvement in the rate that has resulted from the intervention of the Exchange Equalisation Fund.

HOME RAILS DECLINE.

Home Rails have declined further, although they staged a slight recovery on the publication of the traffic returns for the past week, as while the aggregate decrease of the group lines of £184,000 was very unsatisfactory, per se it was evident that the reduction would have been much less than of late had it not been for the temporary labour trouble at the termini of the L M S Co.

BUYING OF ARGENTINES.

Argentine Rails have risen substantially as the result of some speculative buying of the prior-charge stocks, in the hope that this year's crops will escape the ravages of the early frosts which in October and November last wrecked such havoc in the Argentine. The publication of the Central Argentine Co.'s report has, however, occasioned a reaction in the market, as it showed that net receipts were only £998,791, as against £2,436,769.

FOREIGN BOND MARKET.

In the Foreign Bond market there has been some improvement in the Central European issues, but events in the Far East have caused further sharp falls in Chinese Bonds. An interesting feature has been the improvement of three points to 12 that has occurred in the 6 per cent. Peru National Bonds on the strength of reports that the Peruvian Government has prepared a proposal for submission to the bondholders offering to resume interest payments at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum.

INDUSTRIALS.

In the Industrial share market Iron and Steel issues have improved on the indications that conditions in the steel industry give promise of increasing demand.

Cable and Wireless Ordinary stock has improved, though it is recognised that the 11.1 advance in the traffic index figure for the past month was due mainly to the political crisis.

Brewery and Tobacco shares, on the other hand, have been unsettled by "Budget" apprehensions in view of the determination still further to expedite the rearmament programme, etc.

Fison, Packard, and Prentice report trading profit for the past year of £222,411 as against £174,499. Net profit was £126,391 as compared with £94,283.

Ferranti, Ltd., announces an increase of £32,929 in total profits at £279,605. The net balance £68,263 is £3,339 higher.

MINING MARKET IRREGULAR.

The Mining share market has presented an irregular appearance and thus has not been on extensive lines. The non-producers have been offered and are generally lower. Ventersposts and West Witwatersrands in particular have fallen away. Some of the dividend payers, however, have attracted attention; Simmer and Jacks rising to the new high record price of 19s. West Africans have displayed irregularity, as also Diamond shares. Coppers have moved in sympathy with New York, being firmer on balance. Changes, however, are small as compared with a week ago. The decision to remove copper restriction was favourably received by the market. Tin shares have been irregular. Polberros have been subject to a certain amount of selling. Miscellaneous Mines have moved against holders, Wilunas being appreciably lower on profit-taking.

OIL SHARES IRREGULAR.

Changes in Oil shares during the past week have been of an irregular character, with the balance in a downward direction. Various rumours regarding a cut in petrol price, following the cut in Mid-Continental crude oil price has rather unsettled the market. Royal Dutch have fallen away, while Trinidad leases have given way on further consideration of the dividend.

Mexican Eagles, however, have moved ahead on unconfirmed rumours that the company had acquired or was negotiating for acquisition of a property in Peru. Trinidad developments have attracted attention on the increased profits.

BETTER PROSPECTS.

It is good news, however, to learn that President Roosevelt is anxious to restrict further the oil output in the States. At the present moment the Texas field are operating only five days out of seven, while other fields are not restricted to anything like the same extent as Texas. Another trouble which it is hoped to have remedied is that the refineries are producing ad libitum and causing a glut which keeps prices down. It seems that it would take very little to put a much better complexion upon the United States oil industry, and within the next few weeks it is believed that a more cheerful outlook will develop. We see no reason to sell Oil shares.

RUBBERS EASIER.

The Rubber share market has presented an easier appearance on a certain amount of selling and lack of fresh support. The price of the commodity has eased to 8⅜d per lb. Most of the leaders are several pence lower.

TEA SHARES STEADY.

Steady conditions have prevailed in the tea share market during the past week and prices have moved narrowly.

A MINE OF OUR YOUTH.

The old Wanderer mine of Rhodesia created some stir at the beginning of the century because the directors entertained hopes of a big property being opened up. The first company was actually floated in April, 1899, and the chartered company was interested, receiving 60,000 £1 fully paid shares as purchase consideration for their rights, and it subscribed for 36,666 shares in cash. Sir Edmund Davis was chairman of the company, and no stone was left unturned to achieve success. The ore deposit, however, cut out in depth, and the mine was closed down. The manager felt it would make lower down, and Mr. H. G. Latilla, having got hold of the property, proceeded with development work, and enlisted the support of the Gold Fields Rhodesian Development, Ltd. To-day the usual half-yearly dividend of 1s 3d has been declared, making 12½ per cent. as for the previous two years. The Wanderer is a very low grade proposition.

GOOD COLLIERY REPORT.

The dividend of 17½ per cent. paid by Sneyd Collieries, Ltd., for the year to June 30 has been discussed, and the report now issued is encouraging. The colliery, brickworks, etc., are situated in the North Staffordshire Coalfield, and local patronage must be large. The trading profits were £87,381 compared with £83,363 for the previous year. After providing for pension scheme contribution and directors' remuneration the net profit is £83,018 against £79,442. Income-tax and N.D.C. reserve gets £8,500 against £3,025, and the general reserve receives £15,000, leaving £100,925 to be carried forward against £101,577 brought in. Further freehold mines have been purchased during the current year, and the cost has been charged to capital account. The Sneyd business was established in 1881, and it is doubtful whether it was ever in a strong position than it is now.

SPLENDID RECORD.

With their declaration of the usual interim dividend of 15 per cent. the directors of the Ever Ready Co. state that the business continue to be satisfactory. Dealers, however, do not appear to be impressed for the 5s shares are quoted at under 20s to yield nearly 9 per cent. on the dividend of 35 per cent. for the year to March 31 last. They were under the impression that the interim dividend would be less as the bonus of 10 per cent. paid for 1937 was not paid in 1938. The profits of the company, which makes numerous products connected with the electrical industry, show increases from the year 1929. Last year gross profits amounted to £531,000, or more than 50 per cent. on the Ordinary capital.

GORDON SELFRIDGE TRUST.

Some of the London stores companies appear to have been badly hit by the unfavourable trading conditions which have prevailed for some time past. The directors' report now available of the Gordon Selfridge Trust for the year ended June 30, 1938, shows that the dividend received on the holding of 750,000 Ordinary £1 shares in Selfridge & Co. for the year ended January 31, 1938, amounted to only £60,000 as compared with £112,500 for the previous year. But with £75,000 for 1935-36, the net profit is £62,178 against £102,109 a year ago. The dividends on the Preference stock for the year absorbed £60,000, and there is no dividend on the Ordinary stock, which a year ago received 5 per cent. The balance of £8,212 being carried forward against £6,033 brought in.

WOOLWORTH DEAL SANCTIONED.

Permission has been granted by the Treasury to Philip Hill and Partners to re-purchase from American holders and offer for sale in this country 2,200,000 F. W. Woolworth and Co. 5s Ordinary shares. The offer for sale of the whole amount is to be made, it is understood, on November 1. Presumably the Treasury took the view that since these shares could be sold on the British market in any case a transaction across the exchanges could not be prevented.

HIGHLAND DISTILLERIES.

As the quotation for the shares of Highland Distilleries Company, Ltd., had declined from a highest this year of 85s 6d to the current price of 70s, the market was prepared for less striking results in the 12 months that ended on August 31, 1938, than in the previous year of exceptionally high profits. Preliminary figures show that the market's estimate was justified, as the total distribution is to be 25 per cent., less tax, a reduction of 10 per cent. compared with the year before, while £2,500 less is being set aside for depreciation and fully £4,000 less is being carried forward. No doubt the obvious reduction in profits that has taken place is due in part to higher costs of manufacture. The company's prospects in the current year must be bound up to a considerable extent with the general trade outlook.

HIRAM WALKER'S YEAR.

The results of the Canadian parent company of Hiram Walker and Sons for the year to end August last make what must be considered a quite satisfactory showing in view of the effects of recession on similar Canadian concerns. Gross income shows a slight increase, but the net figure is down 180,000 dollars at 6,250,000. Of this fall, however, some 140,000 dollars is due to provision against depreciation of the dollar value of the Scottish assets owing to the fall in sterling. The operations of the Scottish company resulted in a substantial loss, but this is not really of any great importance to the British investor, who holds only the 4½ per cent. Debenture stock, whose real security is the guarantee of the Canadian parent. In this connection it is relevant to note that, thanks to the depreciation of sterling, the value in pounds of the reduced net earnings of the parent company is very slightly increased as against last year.

THE TWIN EAGLES.

Certain modifications of the mutual agreement between the Canadian and Mexican Eagle Companies it is announced permit of the immediate payment of dividends due to date on the 7 per cent. Cumulative Preference shares of the Canadian and Mexican Companies, the distribution on both their Participating Preference shares issues of the full fixed rates for 1937, and a dividend of 6d per share on the no par value Ordinary shares of the Canadian Eagle.

RAYON PRICE REVISION.

Courtaulds, Limited, and the Viscose Rayon Producers Group announce a revision of prices of certain Viscose processed yarns for the weaving trade, some numbers being reduced by 1½d to 2½d per lb., while other have been left unchanged. These adjustments have been made to meet the increased competition from acetate yarns.

BELFAST EXCHANGE

THE WEEKLY SURVEY.

BUSINESS ON QUIET LINES.

NEGLECTED BANK SHARES.

Business was on quiet lines during the past week. British Government stocks opened flat with the setback in sterling, but rallied later on its recovery. In Industrials, Iron and Steels, and Dollar shares were the features of interest.

There was a fair amount of activity in the Gilt-edged market, War Loan opened very dull at 100¼—100½, further receded to 99⅞—100, subsequently recovering to 100 13-16—15-16, closing at 100⅝—¾. 3½ per cent. Conversion Loan was dealt in at 99⅝ and 99 9-16. 4 per cent. Funding Loan fetched 108⅝ and 4½ per cent. Guaranteed Bonds 112½ and 113. Local Loans marked 85, 84¾, and 85, and Ulster 5 per cent. 1950/60 stock 114. New South Wales 5 per cent. 1945 brought 104½.

Bank shares were quite neglected, and the only business recorded in this section was in small lots of Midland Parts at 9½ and Northern Bank "A" at 90s. The latter closed with sellers at 90s and buyers bidding 80s. B shares are inquired for at 40s and offered at 45s.

Corporation issues were quieter. Belfast 5 per cent. 1945 issue was done at 108 and closed with sellers at this price. 3 per cent 1955 stock brought 93½. 3½ per cent. 1940 stock was wanted at 99 and 4½ per cent. 1951 stock at 106. Belfast Water Commissioners 5 per cent. 1950/60 was marked 107 11-16 xd on Monday. 3 per cent. stock was dealt in several times at 92 and 93, and left off with sellers at the latter price. 3 per cent. Mortgage 1942 brought 96½ and 3 per cent. Mortgage 1947 94.

Local Rails were scarcely mentioned. Belfast and Co. Down Ordinary can be had at 1¼ and 4 per cent. Debenture at 41. There are also sellers of the 5 per cent. and 4 per cent. Preference at 5. Great Northern Ordinary was in demand at 3 with sellers at 3½. The 4 per cent. Debenture was bid for at 42 and 4 per cent. Guaranteed stock at 20½.

London and North-Eastern Railway 1st Preference was done at 25.

Business in Industrials was on a small scale. In Spinning and Textiles, York Street were in better demand, and the Ordinary improved to 4s, market closing with buyers at this and sellers at 5s. 6 per cent. Preference are asked for at 10s and 4½ per cent. Debenture at 82. J. & P. Coats changed hands at 34s and Courtaulds at 28s 4½d. Richardson Sons & Owden Preference brought 22s 6d and subsequently eased to 20s.

Bakery shares continued in demand. There were buyers of Bernard Hughes Ordinary at 34s 6d, Preference at 24s 6d, Inglis Ordinary at 85s, Preference at 27s 6d and Debentures at 117s 6d, with sellers of Inglis Ordinary at 88s.

In Brewery and Distillery shares the only business recorded was in Guinness at 107s.

Drapery and Furnishing shares were quiet and unaltered.

Tobacco shares were easier on the week. British Americans were dealt in at 101s 3d, 101s, and 101s 6d. Gallahers changed hands at 123s 3d and Imperial of Great Britain Ordinary at 135s.

Miscellaneous Industrials generally were idle and prices inclined lower.

Dollar shares, however, were a feature, but the best prices were not maintained. U.S. Steels changed hands at 68⅜ and Brazil Tractions at 12¼. General Electrics brought 47¼ and 53 5-16. Radio Corporation 9 1-16 and New York Central Railroad 21¼ and 20⅝.

Iron and Steels came in for more attention. John Browns were done at 30s, Baldwins 6s.

Imperial Chemical Ordinary were dealt in at 30s 3d and Preference 32s 3d. Boots Pure Drugs fetched 40s 6d. W. M. Cuthbert Preference repeated previous price, 27s. Dunlop Rubbers showed improvement, transactions being marked at 22s 6d, 22s 7½d, 23s 3d. Lever Bros. and Unilever 7 per cent. Preference brought 30s 0½d and 30s 1½d and 20 per cent. Preferred 19s 1½d. Maypole Deferred 2s 5d and 2s 4½d. Other business recorded was as follows:—Beechams Deferred 8s 9½d, Radiation 52s 7½d, R.F.D. Co. 3s 1½d, United Serdang Rubber 3s 3d, Associated Portland Cement Preference 26s 6d, British Aluminium 50s, Atlas Stone 7s 3d, British United Shoe 5, Central Waggon Preference 4s 9d, Ordinary 2s 3d, Marks & Spencer "A" 55s 6d, Allen & Hanburys Preference 25s 1½d, Gaumont British 4s 4½d, Standard Motors 14s 6d, 14s 9d, 14s 10½d, Morris Motor Preference 30s 9d, Decca Records 1s, Harrison & Crosfields New Deferred 1s 6d, Ever Ready 19s 9d, 19s 10½d, Imperial Smelting 12s 3½d, Bleachers Preference 5s 1½d, Carreras "B" 18s 10½d, Rhodesian Selection Trust 19s, Witwatersrand Deep 15s 3d, Selection Trust 24s 6d, Western Holdings 16s 6½d, and Roan Antelope 20s.

In the Oil market, Shell Transports changed hands at 85s and 85s 9d and 2nd Preference at 32s 1½d. Mexican Eagles were dealt in at 5s and Canadian Eagles at 10s 8½d. Phoenix Oil fetched 3s and Anglo-Iranian 9 per cent. 2nd Preference 37s 3d.

LOANS GUARANTEES

£300,000 FOR SHAW, SAVILL.

A statement of the guarantees which the Ministry of Finance has given up to the 30th ult. under the Loans Guarantee Acts, issued to-day, contains one additional guarantee as compared with the previous quarter. This is a sum of £300,000 to Shaw, Savill & Albion, Ltd., for a period of ten years, and it relates to the construction of a motor cargo liner now building at the Queen's Island. This guarantee raises the total to £22,712,021, of which £11,894,933 has been repaid, leaving £10,817,088 outstanding. Substantial securities are held by the Exchequer in respect of the outstanding guarantees, and of £37,600 of the total represents payments in respect of losses finally determined.

THE MARKETING OF EGGS.

WHOLESALE DEALERS' PRICES.

BRITON FINED £1,000.

TRIAL IN VIENNA COURT.

VIENNA, Friday.—Charles Aubrey Grant (38), a British subject, who was arrested in Vienna last May, appeared in Court to-day to answer a charge of having in a criminal way offended against the foreign currency restriction laws in force in Germany.

It was alleged by the State prosecution that at the time of his arrest Grant had in his possession foreign currencies, and particularly jewellery, valued at a total of 60,000 marks (£500 at par).

In defence Grant pleaded ignorance of the law, but admitted that he had brought 60,000 marks into Germany in order to buy jewellery cheaply in Austria for a British company.

He was fined 120,000 marks (£1,000), and the jewels and cash found in his possession were confiscated.—Exchange.

MAGHERAFELT COURT.

TWO SUSPENDED SENTENCES.

Judge Davison, Recorder for Londonderry, conducted the business of the Crown Court in Magherafelt Courthouse on Friday.

Charles M'Dermot, Anesley Street, Belfast, appeared in custody charged with breaking and entering the lock-up shop of Mr. Richard M'Nicholl, Church Street, Magherafelt, on July 30, 1938, with intent to commit a felony.

The prisoner, who was not professionally represented, said he would plead guilty to breaking and entering, but not guilty of any intention to commit a felony. Later the accused said he would plead guilty. His actions, he said, were the aftermath of a severe illness.

Accused was bound to the peace, himself in £10 to keep the peace for twelve months.

Bernard Costello, Drumanee, Bellaghy, appeared in custody, charged with having forcibly entered the dwelling-house of Mr. F. H. Lynam, P.E.T., Bellaghy, and stolen therefrom two £1 notes, a wristlet watch, a linen table napkin, and a fountain pen on August 14.

Prisoner, who pleaded guilty, was represented by Mr. Hastings. Mr. Young, S.C.S., appeared for the police.

Mr. Hastings, in a plea for leniency on behalf of his client, said he had been celebrating and had no recollection of what he had done while doing so. Of the £2, he had repaid £1 2s 6d. The money taken had been spent on drink, accused treating several people, who enjoyed his liberality. All the goods had been recovered and restored to the owner and the balance of the money would also be paid.

Mr. Lynam, giving evidence, said, apart from his recent lapse, witness had always looked on accused as a decent harmless man. He was definitely not of the criminal type.

Prisoner was ordered to enter into personal bail of £10 to be of good behaviour for 12 months. His Honour also imposed a suspended sentence of three months' imprisonment.

James Joseph Donnelly, Coolsara, Desertmartin, appeared in custody charged by District-Inspector Dobbin with secreting a number of postal packets in course of transmission by post, the property of the Postmaster-General, about July 17. Mr. Young, S.C.S., prosecuted, and prisoner was defended by Mr. Hastings, solicitor. In reply to Mr. Robinson, Donnelly pleaded guilty.

Mr. Hastings made a strong plea for the accused, an ex-soldier, with good service records.

Sergeant Gibson gave evidence that Donnelly was not long married. There were no previous offences against him.

His Honour imposed a suspended sentence of three months imprisonment, and, in addition, Donnelly to enter into bail of £10 to be of good behaviour for 12 months.

Accused was then discharged.

CO. ANTRIM MYSTERY

AGED FARMER'S INJURIES.

MOTORIST'S REPORT TO BOYS.

Mystery surrounds the finding on the Larne-Ballymena road on Friday night of an aged farmer named Robt. M'Auley, of Crosshill, Broughshane, who was suffering from severe head injuries.

He was removed to the Waveney Hospital, Ballymena, immediately, and on inquiry there this morning it was learned that he had not regained consciousness.

About 7-30 p.m. a motorist, at present unknown notified two boys near the place known locally as the Battery that he had seen an object on the road. Hastening to the scene the boys found the injured man, and at once summoned the Ballymena ambulance.

It was learned that M'Auley had been in Ballymena fair earlier in the day, and that he got off a bus near the scene of the accident.

The police are making investigations.

GLASGOW U. RECTOR ELECTION.

THREE-CORNERED CONTEST

SIR A. SINCLAIR RETURNED.

Glasgow University Rectorial election took place to-day for the seat made vacant in October last year by the death of Canon H. R. L. ("Dick") Sheppard, who died a week after being elected. The office has remained vacant for a year. The candidates were Sir Archibald Sinclair (Liberal), Sir Henry Lunn (Distributist), and Mr. Laurence Housman (Pacifist).

The Scottish Nationalists, at the request of the Senate, withdrew their nomination of Dr. Benes (ex-President of Cecho-Slovakia), as he had not accepted nomination, and with the Socialists now gave their support to the Liberal candidate.

For the first time in memory the traditional fight for the polling booth doors did not take place.

The Distributist club were allotted the defence of the door, but when the Liberals and their supporters arrived no Distributists were present.

The Liberals took charge and, about sixty strong, dressed in boiler suits and Rugger kit with bags of flour, soot, and coloured powder took part in a free-for-all affair with the rest of the students until ammunition and strength were exhausted. Polling then proceeded normally.

result was:—

S. A. SINCLAIR (Lib.)	579
S. H. Lunn (Distributist)	314
M. L. Housman (Pacifist)	303

CURFEW IN HOLY CITY RELAXED

LEADING SHEIKS' OFFER

ARABS MURDER WOMAN

IN HOSPITAL AT GAZA

The day and night curfew in the Old City of Jerusalem is being lifted to-day for six hours, beginning at 10 a.m. enabling exit from and ingress to the city.

IT IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED THAT TROOPS HAVE BEEN STRICTLY PROHIBITED FROM SHOOTING IN THE AREA OF THE MOSQUE OF OMAR. SHOOTING NEAR OTHER MOSLEM PLACES OF WORSHIP IS PERMITTED ONLY IF RETURNING FIRE.

TWO LEADING SHEIKS OF THE MOSQUE OF OMAR IN A LETTER TO THE DISTRICT COMMISSIONER DEPRECATING SHOOTING FROM ANY PART OF THE MOSQUE AREA HAVE OFFERED TO APPOINT GUARDS AT THE DOORS OF MINARETS IN ORDER TO PREVENT THE INGRESS OF DISTURBERS.

WHAT THEY DON'T OBJECT TO.

The sheiks state that they do not object to Government troops being placed in houses overlooking the Mosque.

The name of the British soldier who was killed on Friday by a sniper's bullet while on duty in the Old City is announced as Guardsman Patfield, of the Coldstream Guards.

At Gaza armed Arabs made a daring entry into the Government hospital and killed a woman named Nafissa Bint Slimen, who was being treated for stab wounds.

ROYAL SCOTS AMBUSHED.

There were three British casualties when a detachment of the Royal Scots was ambushed north-west of Nablus to-day.

DRUMMER R. WRIGHT WAS KILLED, PRIVATE H. MOFFAT WAS WOUNDED, AND LANCE-CORPORAL H. MEAD WAS SLIGHTLY WOUNDED. THERE WERE NUMEROUS REBEL CASUALTIES.

IRISH FUSILIERS IN ACTION.

A patrol of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, while clearing a road barrier, were engaged by ambushers north of Nazareth yesterday.

THE FUSILIERS KILLED ONE OF THEIR ATTACKERS AND DISPERSED THE OTHERS.

A patrol of the 1st South Staffordshire Regiment was also engaged by a band of rebels while similarly occupied near Tiberias.

Another patrol belonging to the 1st Buffs was sniped at south of Jaffa. The Buffs replied to the fire and killed a bandit.

MOTOR TRAFFIC BAN.

By order of the officer commanding the 2nd Batt. the West Yorks all motor traffic has been prohibited within the adjoining towns of Ramallah and Bireh, north of Jerusalem, except by the main highway.

SHOT FROM SACRED QUARTER

From ARTHUR MERTON.
(By arrangement with "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post.")

A British soldier has been killed by a shot fired within the area of Haram-Esh-Sherif in Jerusalem.

The area, really part of the Old City of Jerusalem, has since the Middle Ages enjoyed great veneration among the Moslems the world over, because of its religious history. It is one of the sacred places of Islam, because it embraces two of its most revered mosques, that of Omar, commonly called the Dome of the Rock, which is Mount Moriah and Aksa.

ENTITLED TO SANCTITY.

It has become the resting place of many noted Moslems and is also a place of worship and pilgrimage second only to the holy places of Arabia. Its religious character entitles it to sanctity, and it has always been the desire and intention of the British Administration to respect that sanctity.

But the Arab Moslems themselves, among them the highest dignitaries, have diverted this sacred enclosure to purposes other than those for which it was intended, purposes which are contrary to all considerations of law and order. They have allowed it to be used as a refuge for malefactors and as the centre of a conspiracy against established authority in the country.

Such a state of affairs cannot be tolerated by any self-respecting Government and would certainly not be condoned by any responsible-minded follower of the Prophet. It is to the interest of those who hold it in such reverence as a place of worship that its present bad characteristics should be eliminated.

If those responsible for its administration are not prepared themselves to restore this ancient and beautiful sanctuary to its former exclusively religious character, it must fall on those responsible for law and order, and for the lives of all dwelling in the land, to rid Haram-Esh-Sherif of the features which have contributed so much to the intensification of the unrest and to ensure that it shall never again be put to such uses.

NEED FOR ACTION.

Without action to clear undesirable elements from this district and to destroy the rebel arsenal, what has been done in the past three days would be completely stultified. Haram-Esh-Sherif would continue to serve as a base and refuge for any wrongdoers or rebels who chose to defy authority, and so would perpetuate the menace to orderly government.

Obviously anticipating the possibility of military action against Haram, the remaining members of the Supreme Moslem Council of Sheikhs, Said el Khatib, preacher at the Aksa Mosque, and Faiz el Ansaria, deputy principal Sheikh of Haram-Esh-Sherif, sent a letter to the High Commissioner, Sir Harold MacMichael, condemning the shooting from any place within the mosque.

If such occurred, it was stated they were prepared, if the military authorities agreed to place guards at the doors of the minarets inside the Aksa Mosque, to prevent the entrance of anyone trying to disturb public security. They had no objection to the Government placing troops in houses overlooking the Haram Esh Sherif area directly outside the walls.

It should be noted that the Sheikhs refer only to the Akso Mosque, whereas there are other minarets in Haram Esh Sherif. One can only conclude that the Sheikhs are unable to control what goes on within the district.

PART OF OPERATION.

Actually certain measures, which are in reality an essential part of the clearance operations now in progress in the Old City, could be put into effect without in any way touching Haram Esh Sherif itself. There is a series of buildings which, although they are attached to Haram's western walls, are really no part of it. These buildings, some 40 or 50 yards in depth, have always harboured wrongdoers and hidden stores and contraband weapons and ammunition. The clearance of these dwellings and offices is an essential part of the operations at present proceeding for the elimination of the unsatisfactory features of the Old City, and it is expected that this part of the work will be embarked upon very soon.

It is true that some of these houses have communicating doors into Haram, but they form no integral part of the sanctuary, and work can be started without even considering the position of Haram.

It would be a great improvement if these buildings in process of clearance could be torn down. That would leave a most useful open area between the Haram wall and the rest of the Old City and at the same time enhance the aspect of Haram itself.

UNDERGROUND PASSAGES.

In any event, when Haram Esh Sherif is entered for search purposes, and it will be by no means the first time that entry has been effected by the authorities for the purposes of public security, there will be no intention to touch or in any way to intrude on the sacred portion of the mosques.

But it is imperative to investigate the underground area and discover the subterranean passages by which wrongdoers and even high-placed Moslem dignitaries have found ready egress and ingress in time of stress.

The stopping of these passages is an essential part of the cleaning-up process and the maintenance of law and order. It cannot affect the sanctity of the sacred enclosure, since these passages have no part in religious tradition.

MORE OUTRAGES REPORTED.

Although Jerusalem continues to be the centre of tension, incidents are reported in all parts of the country.

Nablus, from where all the supporters of Ragheb Nashashibi, president of the Arab National Defence Party, are said to have fled, is the scene of an increasing number of kidnappings.

Shots were fired at Brigade Headquarters at Nablus and at a military billet at Gaza. Soldiers returned the fire.

The Haifa offices of Thomas Cook were set on fire. There was little damage. In the same town two Arabs found with seditious literature were arrested, as were three who were carrying ammunition. Another was arrested in Jaffa with a loaded automatic.

MIDDAY PRAYER PLEA.

Yesterday being Friday and public access to the Aksa Mosque being impossible under the curfew order, the Supreme Moslem Councillors approached the Military Governor of Jerusalem, Major-General R. N. O'Connor, to relax the restrictions for the midday prayer. Major-General O'Connor said that he could not grant the request, but to enable the weekly service to be held he was prepared to allow 20 selected Moslems to enter Haram Esh Sherif provided that they returned after the services.

The councillors pointed out that the congregation must number 40 for the service, and there were only 10 sheikhs within Haram Esh Sherif. The number was accordingly extended to 30.

Military escorts and officials were all ready at the appointed time, but none of the Moslems appeared to avail themselves of the arrangement.
